HOT WRITE: AFTER 'TALK FOR WRITING' (1 Semester)

TRANSCRIBED FROM HANDWRITING

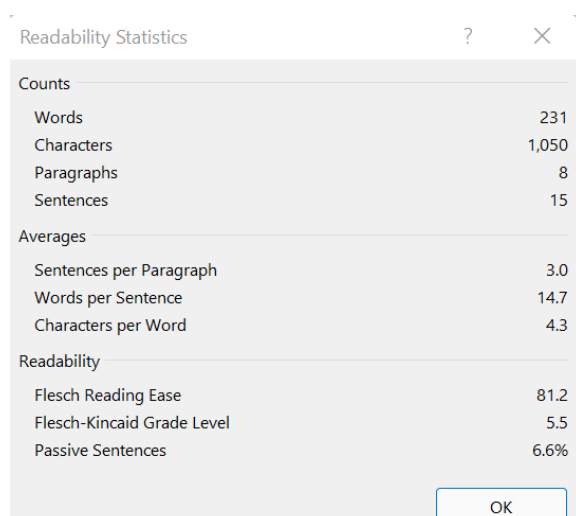

James had always been curious. One sunny day he went to use the toilet and he noticed it kept on flushing which had not happened before. He decided to sit down and flushed the toilet and it sucked him inside a cavernous sewer.

Before James was a disgusting feast. Hundreds of tiny rats swarmed around carving pieces of pie, rotten strawberries and half-filled beer bottles. He looks up to see a giant rat king wearing a scarlet cloak, emerald tunic and a golden crown. James notices a parchment that says if you touch the trillion-dollar crown you will come out with a frown.

Transfixed, James drifted towards the rat king. He removed the golden crown and placed it on his head. It felt to James like golden sunlight. James gasped, he remembered what he had been told.

Instantly a thousand mocking voices rang in his head like sharp bells. James shuddered and ran from the cavernous sewer. Just in time he reached the toilet. He pressed the flush button and came back up to his bathroom still wearing the golden crown.

Something strange happened after that day. James play-dressed up with the crown and always felt a magical glow. Although James felt it drew him back to the bathroom many times he never saw the rat king again.
