“Pablo Garcia Maniara does not speak about himself, he wants his intellectual works to take the spotlight, he describes them as such because he does not consider himself an artist.

His work is a dedication, a way to restore faith to those who are faithful. That's why his works depict animals, especially dogs, the epitome of a faithful friend who deserves, as such, a statue to honor him. This is Maniara's work: to be the impresario of the sphinxes of the 21st century and, at the same time, a promoter: inviting people to pay tribute to those beings so dear to humans that they often deserve a monument to make them immortal.

Pablo Garcia Maniara is an architect in service of the spirit; he speaks of affection rather than art, discusses the concrete and lets the concept flow freely.”
