CONSENT FOR AMALGAM OR COMPOSITE FILLINGS

After completing your exam and X-rays, the doctor may diagnose the need for a filling, or fillings, to help eliminate cavities and improve oral health. A cavity will never go away on its own. There are different types of filling materials that can be used. Two of the most common filling materials are Amalgam and Composite. Below are some facts regarding each:

AMALGAM: The historic and traditional silver filling material.

According to the American Dental Association, Amalgam is:

- Metal alloy (silver color) including copper, tin, silver, mercury, and others
- Not a hazard
- Durable for chewing
- Partial to potential sensitivity to cold (metal conducts temperature)
- Less expensive and most insurance companies cover expected percentage.

COMPOSITE: Tooth colored filling material

According to the American Dental Association, a Composite is:

- A white colored substance, which bonds to teeth
- Made with a composite of materials including ceramic particles (metal sparing fillings)
- Partial to potential tooth sensitivity (temperature and other)
- Susceptible to needing replacement earlier than amalgam fillings
- Normally not covered, or partially covered by insurance. Therefore, all composite fillings will cost approximately $45.00 more per tooth.

PLEASE INDICATE BELOW WHICH FILLING TYPE YOU PREFER:

_____ I would prefer composite (tooth colored) fillings on my child's front and back teeth.

_____ I would prefer composite (tooth colored) fillings on my child's front teeth and amalgam (silver) fillings on their back teeth

By signing below, I state that I have read this form and have had any questions, answered. I also have researched the information provided and understand that my insurance company may change coverage for filling types.

We reserve the right to charge interest in the amount of 1.5% (18% APR) on any unpaid balances after 60 days.

Information About Dental Insurance

Dental insurance benefits can cause a great deal of confusion for some patients. Unlike medical insurance, which often has a set co-pay and/or percentage coverage without a maximum allowance, dental insurance benefits often are based upon a random formula and include a maximum amount of coverage. This below attempts to explain some of the most misunderstood features of a dental plan.

UCR (Usual, Customary, Reasonable)

UCR is the maximum amount your insurance plan will pay for a procedure. It is based upon a percentage formula set by the individual insurance company and is not always based upon actual average dentists' fees in your area. The patient is responsible for the costs above the UCR level.

Preferred Providers

Your plan may encourage you to go to a dentist on its list of preferred providers. Most plans allow you to see any dentist you would like, regardless of whether the dentist is on the list. However, your benefits may be different when you visit an out of network dentist.

Pre-Existing Conditions

Some dental insurance plans do not cover conditions that existed prior to enrollment. One example is a "missing tooth clause," which will not pay for the replacement of a tooth that was missing prior to the beginning of coverage.

Frequency Limitations

Some plans set limits on certain procedures and those procedures may not be covered by your insurance as often as they are dentally necessary. Some common examples include only allowing for sealants once in a lifetime when sealants generally last only 3 — 7 years. Other patients may need dental cleanings more than the two times per year that their plan allows.

Deductibles/Percentage Covered

Most plans have a deductible amount, which the patient pays before any benefits begin. This is a one-time fee each benefit year. In addition, insurance plans set a percentage of costs they will cover for each type of treatment. For example, an insurance company may cover 100% of preventative work (exams, cleanings, etc.), 80% of basic restorations like fillings and 50% of major restorations like crowns.

Yearly Maximums

Almost all plans will have an annual maximum benefit and many times this amount is as low as $1,000 — $3,000. Your plan will not pay more than this set amount in any given benefit period (typically a year). Patients are responsible for charges above this maximum.

Treatment Exclusion/Wait Periods

Certain plans will not cover some procedures, such as sealants, implants and orthodontics. Dental plans may also place a waiting period on some procedures. For instance, your plan may require you to wait six months for a crown to be a covered service.

Alternative Treatment

Often dental insurance plans will only cover the least expensive treatment possible. For example, many plans only cover the cost of mercury amalgam silver fillings instead of tooth-colored composite fillings. The insurance company will pay its set UCR for an amalgam filling and the patient will pay the difference between the cost of the amalgam and the cost of a composite filling. Many times the least expensive alternative treatment is not the best choice for optimal dental health. Patients need to choose what is best based upon their needs, not their insurance coverage.

Get The Care You Need

When considering all of this information, it is important to remember that you may need dental care that falls outside of your plan benefits or at a time when you have reached your maximum allowance. In order to avoid future dental complications that could require more extensive (and expensive) treatment later, patients always need to make decisions that are in the best interest of their dental health and seek treatment in a timely fashion.
