This course is intended for patrol officers and supervisors who wish to become field training officers or field training supervisors utilizing the San Jose Model of instruction and evaluation. The course will introduce specific teaching methods applicable to adult learners, performance evaluation using standardized rating procedures, techniques for remedial training, and legal issued pertinent to recruit training. This model originated in San Jose, California Police Department in 1972 and has been emulated across the country by municipal and county law enforcement agencies.

I understand that the Solkolove Method has been taught to many of the Field Training Officers in the MTU (myself included). I request and welcome Field Training Officers taught in the Sokolove Method to attend the training and give me a fair and honest opinion as to which they like better and what parts of each they can take back to your organization. ***

This is part of the evaluation aspect of training which is very important to constant improvement.
