NOTIONS ...

Everyone in the high school managed to look into the office for either an excused (you hoped) absence or an unexcused tardy slip to take to the appropriate teacher for his or her signature. Sometimes snow blocked the roads on blustery winter mornings, and absence slips fell as quickly as the snowflakes. Buses ran late. To pass the time, since classrooms were so empty, students amused themselves by playing Password, winning at French or Latin football, and building towers out of National Geographic's. But as the snow disappeared, outside, students began to reappear. Warm spring weather brought students outdoors to eat candy bars or to play a quick game of Frisbee.

...OF THE PAST

Many students held part-time jobs at gas stations, on farms, at greenhouses, at restaurants, and at the Dairy Queen. Contact lenses were quite popular, and soft lenses made it possible for more people to enjoy the benefits of contacts. Often, teachers had to excuse students to the bathrooms to get the dust out of their eyes. CB (citizen's band) radios were a cult. Even First Mama Betty Ford got in on the scene, calling her good buddies to watch out for the smokies. Everyone secretly wished for a Vette under the Christmas tree.

Clothes: Updates of Classics

Jeans remained to dominate teenagers' wardrobes. Harry Appelbaum's in Decatur provided a wide selection of jeans--seldom did two pairs look alike. Many broke the monotony of wearing jeans by wearing bib overalls with chambray shirts. Many guys and girls at BHS kept beauty salons in business when they decided to rid themselves of their long locks. Herbal shampoos, blow dryers, and permanents became a part of keeping one's hair in top shape. Landscapes, tweeds, and portraits made artistic works out of sweaters. Cardigans took the novel look of "The Wrap." Gauze was a popular fabric for numerous peasant blouses.

Shirts took on a Western flair with contrasting yokes, sleeves, and cuffs. Messages, glitter, and prints added variety to the immortal "Tee" shirt. Jewelry was worn by both the male and female populations at BHS. Many chokers were made of liquid silver, wooden beads, feathers, and macrame cord. Turquoise was set in bracelets, earrings, rings, and chokers, as well. Many students gazed at their mood rings to determine their innermost feelings.

RETRACING MARKS OF FADED SEAMS

An assortment of shoes trudged through the halls of BHS: earth shoes, sandals, platforms, sneakers, wedgies, and saddles. Socks were argyles, flowered, and some even spotted pictures of hamburgers and french fries. Girls decided to drop the hemlines of their skirts and dresses to below the knee. Many updated the classic "forties" designs that actresses like Betty Grable wore. Jumpsuits were a modernized version of a mechanic's coveralls, for both men and women, and were trimmed with decorative braids, belts, and buttons. Many looked as if they were a part of Evel Knievel's wardrobe.

PATTERNS TO FOLLOW

Whether he's shooting baskets, clowning around in American History, or coaching the team, Gene Schnierle always looks on the brighter moments of life. We dedicate this yearbook to him, for helping us to realize OUR "Stitch In Time."

'OUR TOWN' REACHES OUT

Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" proved to be quite an experience for the audience, directors, and the cast. In "Our Town," we traveled through the lives of the people of Grover's Corners, New Hampshire--daily life, marriage, and death. Director Donna Sharp commented, "To me, the play was a very worthwhile experience. It took a strong cast to master the pantomime and carry out the dramatic theme to a successful conclusion. I was very proud of the cast for their professional attitude. The most frequent comment made to me after the play was that it really made people stop and think about how quickly life passes, and the need to appreciate each day. This, in itself, makes the play a success."

FESTIVE CAROLS

The choral department, under the dedicated direction of Carol Drayton, had a very rewarding year. The Chorus received a rating of first at contest, and many Solo and Ensemble contestants placed high. "A Madrigal Christmas," the first public Madrigal dinner at BHS, was excellently received. Guests were served rolls, figgy pudding, fruits, cheese, and hot wassail while being serenaded by the elaborately costumed singers.

WILKINSON WEAVES WAY TO STATE

Bement's speech team consisted of only three members this year, but Jodi Camden, Kristi Whaley, and Mark Wilkinson proved the idea of quality, not quantity. Kristi Whaley and Mark Wilkinson placed 6th in the District finals at Paxton in Humorous Duet Acting. In Oratorical Declamation, Mark Wilkinson placed first at the MacArthur Invitational and advanced to the State Speech Contest at Bradley University. 1: Jodi Camden, a pro at Verse Reading, and Mark Wilkinson practice their orations. 2: Speech coaches Donna Sharp and Cathy Flood, and team Kristi Whaley, Mark Wilkinson, and Jodi Camden pose in Bryant Cottage. Abraham Lincoln rested for the night in Bryant Cottage before he met Stephen Douglas the next day, to agree on debates. 3: Woody Allen wrote the script, and Kristi Whaley and Mark Wilkinson provided the action in "Play It Again, Sam."

THESPIANS 'GLITTER'

Thespians Troupe 2896 grew in numbers this year, and its members provided the best variety and quality of drama seen in Bement--from "A Madrigal Christmas" to "Our Town." Mark Wilkinson received the Outstanding Thespians award. 1: Presenting pins is a major part of the initiation. 2: "Glitter," an original musical reader's theatre by Mark Wilkinson, traces the history of drama.

ANNUAL STAFF SEWS IT TOGETHER

1: Since there was no Annual Party this year, '76 staffers, like Julie Foran, were the first to see the tardy yearbooks. 2: Suzanne Jay gets ideas from former yearbooks, while Cathy Buckner roughs it on her own. 3: Laying out the dummy sheet is the first step in planning a page, as Edward Glennon demonstrates. 4: Leftover pictures must be sorted for resale to students, and it is always a tedious chore. 5: Checking correct spelling and waiting for retakes has Kim Jones and Kathy Kirwan, who have the underclassmen pages, worried and busy.

DEADLINES SHOW RAW EDGES

A yearbook runs deeper than the ink on its pages—as anyone who has ever worked on a yearbook knows. Pages must first be planned and photo-assignment sheets made. The best pictures are processed and selected from the many possibilities. Later they must be cropped and tagged. Many long hours are spent writing copy and headlines by the Copy Staff, measuring each letter so that it will fit exactly in the space provided. Finally, layouts are completed, pictures adapted to the layout, and close inspection is made of all details. Hopefully, the pages will turn out the way they were planned. Each person involved finds himself standing alone waiting for compliments but usually hears everything he did wrong.

2: Debbie Crim decides that she can't wait any longer to see her yearbook, so she rips into one of the boxes.

4: Writing and figuring headlines "adds" to Copy Editor Mark Wilkinson's worries.

5: Editor Sandy Fendley expertly binds all the phases of the yearbook together—the identifying stitch of a fantastic editor.

LAUGH YOUR SELF

It's been a long and trying year, but it's been highlighted with many special and happy moments. I hope this book helps you recall these moments and preserve them. I hope you appreciate and enjoy our "Stitch in Time" and remember the year with smiles and laughter. Good luck always!
