FRANCIS PUIG

I live at Deptford, with my son, in the house of Mr Henry Whiffin in the parish of St Paul, Deptford. On Saturday, the 19th of August, the house was all safe when I went to bed, which was in a few minutes of twelve o'clock. The fastenings of the house were secure as usual. They were quite safe. The windows were not fastened, but pushed close down, and the blind was down over it. My servant, my baby, and myself were in the house on this night. I went to bed, and heard a noise, as I fancied, about two o'clock I burnt a rush-light, but it was gone out by some means, and I was rather surprised at it. I sat up a little time in bed to listen, and after listening sometime, I heard another noise over my head, like the fire-irons falling down. I instantly got out of bed, and gave the alarm. I went down stairs, and into the street, as far as the chapel. I went out at the front of the house. I saw one of the railway policemen. I did not see any person go from the house. As soon as I got hold of the policeman's arm, he supported me, and brought me home. I was confused, and could scarcely see, but when I returned to the house I observed the window which had been down was open, and the two back doors I found open. Those doors have been secure the night before. I discovered that the house had been robbed. I missed some of my own property. My pockets were turned inside out, and empty. They were the pockets which I wore. I missed my purse, with six sovereigns in it, and some silver which I had in my pocket, and everything which had been in it. They had been on a chair the night before, at the foot of my bed, in my own bedroom. I have since seen the purse and some of the property.

M'CONACHY

Q. Which way did the thieves break into the house?

A. I cannot say, but the window was open, and I found the two back doors open. I did not observe that the bolts were broken, nor was the window that I know of.
