

What is a Socialization?

Socialization means learning to be part of our world. When we talk about socializing pet puppies, most people think it means meeting other dogs and people. While it is essential to introduce other dogs and humans, socialization means so much more. It's helping them learn to be comfortable around many different things. As a pet within a human world, that includes many kinds of people, environments, buildings, sights, noises, smells, animals, and other dogs. I like to call this Bravery Skills.

Why Is Socialization Important?

Young puppies, need to get used to the everyday things they encounter. When they are older, they become much more suspicious of things they haven't encountered yet. When puppies become comfortable with the everyday sights, sounds, people and animals life is much more enjoyable for everyone. We don't want them spending their life jumping in fright at every blowing leaf or squirrel chirp. Later on natural suspicion is developed to make sure they do react with caution to new things that could hurt them.

A well socialized dog will also help them to be more relaxed in new situations. Dogs that have poor social skills are much more likely to react in fear or with aggression to. These dogs tend to have high levels of stress and suffer from separation anxiety too.

How Do I Begin Socialization?

Socialization is different for everyone. If you don't go boating, then you may not care to introduce your puppy to boats. But, the more your dog experiences the better chance of being comfortable in most situations.

Sometimes it's difficult to socialize puppies during their first few weeks because they need their vaccinations before venturing out very far in the world. But there is quite a bit you can do while waiting for vaccinations to be completed. This list is meant to inspire your imagination and think of things in your everyday life your puppy may encounter. Keep in mind, the older your puppy gets, the more difficult it will be to get them over their suspicion. Be sure to reward your dog with happy praise and a treat for investigating something or someone they aren't sure about. Don't give up, be patient, and don't be afraid to ask a professional trainer for help. Be patient, your dog is doing the best they can with what they know.
