

SAYING GOODBYE

She comes to me a friend in need of me
An open hand, a welcome place to be
A shoulder to cry on if just for a moment, a moment to grieve

To be on with your life now that's just what you need
Oh, the ache will go in time, in time you'll see
There's a new road's calling, it beckons out for you, I want to help you believe

When hearing her words, she comes to share her day
She's mending her wounds; she smiles, she's something to say
Taking a hand, she's certain and hopeful, she needs to be on her way

Sometimes it seems a man just can't see
His beating heart could never deceive
And the tears that surely will come
When he knows it's all come undone
With a last breath of love's warm embrace fading away

Get on with your life now that's just what you need
The ache will go in time, in time you'll see
But driving the road that rolls out before me, I will not believe

But I know that's how it must be
And I know I just couldn't see
Still the scene plays in my mind
Like a ghost that haunts me at night
The way she's looking at me, and saying goodbye
