Enhancing your space

Where openness

meets luxury

Interior Partitioning

Glass is an excellent choice for internal partitions. Not only does it allow light to penetrate further into a building but it can provide many other functions.

There are numerous applications for glass as an internal divide. Keeping natural light penetrating as far into a building as possible is a major benefit not only in reducing artificial lighting but providing occupant comfort as well.

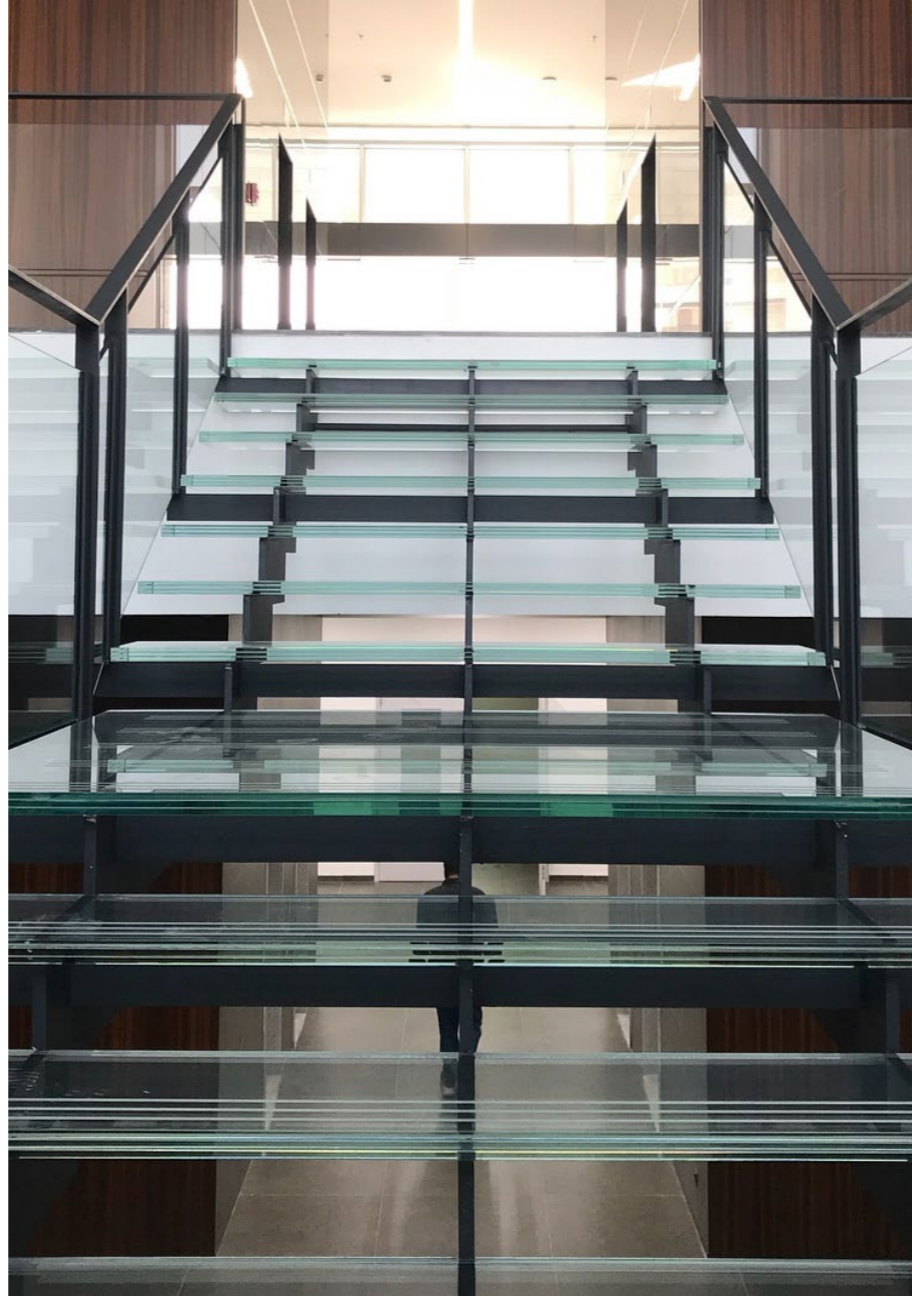

Balustrades

Use glass as a barrier to allow light to flow throughout the interior without compromising on safety.

Rails

Glass railings have a sleek design and allow for a great view with a modern, upscale look.

Glass rails demand toughened glass. Hyrrokkin offers frameless glass railing and curvy designs.

Shower Partitioning

Glass streams light from room to room to create softly lit interiors, while protecting privacy. Glass Partitions bring a feeling of space and openness to a room.

Stairs & Flooring

Glass for staircases creates a contemporary and sophisticated look in the interior space. Whether transparent or translucent, glass creates a fresh look and feel.

The use of glass as a floor panel is becoming increasingly popular as a means of introducing natural daylight into interiors and opening up areas.

Furniture

Glass furniture creates a contemporary setting in the interior space with its interplay of light and texture.

Thoughtfully

Shop Front

Glass shapes the architectural character of a building both from the exterior perspective and in the interior space. Inside, the boundaries increasingly dissolve and daylight floods the space. Outside, the large glass facades appear seamless and monumental.

Glass can contrast transparency with gently diffused light to bring a feeling of space and openness to a room when used in partitions.
