

NYPD: Police Impersonator Is Robbing Craigslist Cellphone Sellers

BY DAVID COLON IN NEWS ON JUN 15, 2017 9:43 AM

A grifter in his 20s is popping up around the city under the guise of buying cellphones from people and then stealing them while falsely identifying himself as a police officer, according to the real police.

(DCPI)

Cops say that the suspect, a man between the ages of 22 and 27, has struck in three separate incidents in February, April and June this year. In each case, the man allegedly arranged to buy a cellphone from his victim over Craigslist, then identified himself as a police officer when he met the sellers, claimed the phones were stolen and took them.

In the February crime, the suspect met a 24-year-old woman on Columbus Avenue and West 63rd street on the evening of the 19th after arranging to buy two phones from her. When they met, he pulled out a badge and took the cellphones, while also grabbing the woman's breast before driving away in a white four door sedan.

In the April incident, the suspect met up with a 16-year-old boy, on the evening of the 15th, under the auspices of buying a phone. The pair met up at 200 Eastern Parkway, and while the man didn't get away with the phone, investigators say he did pull out a shield again and tell the 16-year-old he was a cop before driving away in the same white four door sedan.

Finally, on the afternoon of June 3rd, the suspect met another person, a 23-year-old man, at 2155 University Avenue. Police say the suspect once again pulled out a shield and said he was an officer, and this time he got away with the cellphone, before fleeing in the white four door sedan, which this victim said had New Jersey license plates.

Anyone with information in regards to this incident is asked to call the NYPD's Crime Stoppers Hotline at 1-800-577-TIPS (8477) or for Spanish, 1-888-57-PISTA (74782). The public can also submit their tips by logging onto the Crime stoppers website or by texting their tips to 274637 (CRIMES) then enter TIP577.

SPRINGFIELD GARDENS, Queens (WABC) -- An off-duty NYPD officer fatally shot one of two men who allegedly were trying to rob him Monday night during a Craigslist scam in Queens.

"I saw him with his gun drawn, that was the only thing, I stood my distance," said Eric, a witness.

In the exclusive video, the silhouette seen in the distance is an off duty NYPD officer with his gun drawn pointed at Devon Holder. The 30-year-old had just seconds before, allegedly tried to rob the officer.

Eric didn't want to show his face or be identified.

"He was telling him, 'Let me see your hands, let me see your hands,'" Eric said.

Around 10:30 Monday night, the officer had come to 145th Avenue to meet Holder and a second man.

The suspects had placed an ad on Craigslist, saying they had a white BMW for sale.

Sources tell Eyewitness News, one suspect told the officer the vehicle was down a nearby driveway, but once there, there was no car.

Holder allegedly pulled out this BB gun, grabbed the officer's wallet, and tried to rob him.

When Holder spotted the officer's badge, the officer pulled out his gun and shot Holder.

"I heard pow, pow, two shots and then three more," said Troy Bennett, a witness.

Eric says the officer was focused on Holder.

"He was on the phone with his gun drawn with the gentleman on the ground, but I didn't know he was a cop until I heard him on the phone saying, might have been telling someone his badge number," Eric said.

In the exclusive video, you see back up arrive.

Holder was on the ground, and officers are seen looking for that BB gun, which police say they did eventually find.

Eric watched as paramedics took Holder away, he died at the hospital.

"It's an eye opener. It's sad, it's sad," Eric said.

Police are still looking for a second suspect and the investigation is ongoing.

Police: Robbers Used Craigslist

By CHRISTINE HAUSER JUNE 13, 2008

Trying to exploit the popularity of iPhones, four men used Craigslist to lure would-be buyers to Brooklyn and then robbed them at gunpoint, the police said on Thursday.

The four men were arrested on Wednesday in Flatlands after officers set up a sting operation by responding to an advertisement on Craigslist, the police said.

The men — identified by the police as Michel Orival, 19; Elorge Zamy, 20; Ulyses Campbell, 18, and Christopher Thervil, 19, all of Brooklyn — have been charged with robbery and possession of a weapon.

Lt. Garfield Brown, of the Police Department's central robbery section in Brooklyn, said that the men used Craigslist to advertise a bulk sale of iPhones at a set price, arranged meetings with potential buyers, then robbed them of cash and other possessions.

Most of the meetings were set up in the evenings on various corners in the Flatbush area, he said.

"They were hoping that the victim would come with money to make the purchase," he said.

Lieutenant Brown said the men were arrested after the police noticed an advertisement on Craigslist that resembled one of the prior postings in which a buyer was lured to a meeting and then robbed. Officers posed as interested buyers and arrested the group. A loaded 9-millimeter gun was found in their car, Lieutenant Brown said.

Apple introduced the iPhone a year ago and has sold about six million of them. It recently introduced a new model that will be available starting on July 11.

Police are looking for two men who answered a Craigslist ad to buy a MacBook Pro, but instead stole the laptop at gunpoint.

The robbery happened at about 6:30 p.m. on Feb. 18 inside an apartment building on West 142nd Street in Harlem.

Police say the 25-year-old victim walked into the building to meet someone who had expressed interest in buying the computer via Craigslist. When he got there, police say two men took the suspect to the third floor of the building where one of the men took out a silver gun and demanded his belongings.

The suspects took the victim's iPhone, the laptop and $50 in cash before fleeing, police say. The victim was uninjured.

New York City man robbed at gunpoint for ... bitcoin?

Dan Mangan | @DanMangan

Published 2:11 PM ET Fri, 5 June 2015 Updated 3:21 PM ET Fri, 5 June 2015

Put up your hands and start typing your PIN!

A New York man was robbed at gunpoint of $1,100 worth of bitcoin, police told CNBC.com on Friday.

The case is strongly similar to at least one other robbery in the Big Apple involving the digital currency earlier this year.

Philippe Lopez | AFP | Getty Images

The latest combination street-cyber crime occurred at around 11:30 a.m. on May 27 in the Crown Heights section of Brooklyn.

The 28-year-old victim told police he went to a street corner there to meet a man who had answered his Craigslist.com ad offering bitcoins for sale, police said.

The purported buyer then led the victim to a car to complete the purchase, where another man sitting in the backseat pulled a gun and ordered the victim to electronically transfer the bitcoins to the thieves, cops said.

Read MoreBitcoin needs more consumer protection

After the victim sent the bitcoins, the thugs then took the victim's cellphone, and drove off, according to police. The victim then called 911.

"It's still under investigation," said the police spokeswoman. She said there was no surveillance video footage of the virtual money stickup available.

In February, the New York Observer reported quoted a bitcoin dealer named Dean Katz, who described how he had been robbed at gunpoint by a man in Queens who had arranged to meet him to buy bitcoin so the man could gamble on the Super Bowl. Katz said he was forced to transfer $8,500 worth of bitcoin and also was robbed of $3,500 in cash.

New York police on Friday gave additional details about that Jan. 22 robbery of Katz. They said he entered a car containing two other men at about 1:50 a.m. that morning to complete the sale.

"He was held at gunpoint and the suspects requested his Samsung phone and money," police said. Katz then got out of the car, and the suspects fled, cops said.

No arrests have been made in Katz's case.

Katz also told the Observer he has heard from other bitcoin traders about additional strong-arm robberies of the digital currency as well as the use of counterfeit cash to buy bitcoin.

The Observer article said that a New York City firefighter had been stabbed during a robbery of bitcoins that he had agreed to sell. But police on Friday told CNBC that that robbery, which occurred on Feb. 9, "is not bitcoin related." The firefighter's credit card and PIN number were stolen, and he was stabbed in the arm, police said.

Man Wanted In Armed Robbery Of Pricey Yeezy Sneakers

December 17, 2017 at 11:53 pm Filed Under: Ali Bauman, Local TV, Manhattan, Subway Robbery, Yeezy

NEW YORK (CBSNewYork) — Police were searching Sunday night for a bandit who robbed a teenage boy at gunpoint for some pricey sneakers right in Times Square.

As CBS2's Ali Bauman reported, sneakers passed hand to hand in the trading pit at Sneaker Con this weekend in Midtown. Teens were bartering for each other's in-demand shoes, and one of the hottest brands was Adidas' Yeezy sneakers.

"People will do whatever they want for those shoes," said Paul Mako.

Police said just a few blocks from Sneaker Con on Saturday in Times Square, a 17-year-old boy was robbed at gunpoint of his Yeezy sneakers – by a man he thought was going to buy them.

Police say a man bid on the boy's sneakers online, and then agreed to meet a 17-year-old in the mezzanine of the Times Square-42nd Street subway station at 42nd Street and Seventh Avenue around noon Saturday.

"Meetups, you can get hurt — but that's never happened to me, because I meet up in safe locations," said Mike Ainauzzi.

"I've done plenty of Craigslist deals for shoes, but I prefer to do it in person," said Daniel Tarallo.

The victim told police that the suspect initially agreed to pay $340, but once he showed up said he needed to break a $100 bill and started walking down into the subway, asking strangers to make change. The victim followed him.

Police said that was when the suspect showed the victim he had a gun in his waistband, took the kicks, and ran away.

Shoe aficionados at Sneaker con said they are wary to sell over the internet, because you never know who is really on the other side of the deal.

"There's been countless stories where people have bought a pair of shoes, asked for the money back because they thought it was fake, and then just send over a brick and keep the shoes and get the money back," said Joseph Ashaj. "It happens all the time."

"You're never supposed to go alone, and always meet up by a police station or something," Mako added.

The suspect in the robbery is described as an approximately 6 foot tall, 190 pound 23-year-old Hispanic male.

Anyone with information in regards to the robbery is asked to call the NYPD's Crime Stoppers Hotline at 1-800-577-TIPS (8477) or for Spanish, 1-888-57-PISTA (74682). The public can also submit their tips by logging onto the Crime stoppers website at WWW.NYPDCRIMESTOPPERS.COM or by texting their tips to 274637 (CRIMES) then enter TIP577.

Brooklyn teen tries to steal Air Jordans, loses arm in Craigslist robbery gone wrong: police

Chris Brito, Rick Boone and Myles Miller

3 years ago

CANARSIE, Brooklyn — A robbery victim, who decided to take the law into his own hands by mowing down an armed teen thief, severing his right arm, is now in handcuffs himself, police said.

Police arrested the robbery victim, Philip Pierre, 39, of East Flatbush, Brooklyn, and charged him with attempted murder. The alleged teen thief, Zachary Sam, 17, also of Canarsie, Brooklyn, was charged with robbery and criminal possession of a weapon in the Craigslist robbery gone wrong. Both were charged on Friday.

Police sources say the teenager connected with Pierre on Craigslist on Friday. Pierre was selling a pair of Air Jordan sneakers.

They met about 1 p.m. near Avenue M and East 84th Street in Canarsie, where Sam got into Pierre's Honda Pilot SUV and pulled out a gun, a police source said. The teen allegedly stole the Jordan Retro 8 sneakers and walked away.

Sam managed to make it only about 100 yards with the shoes when the driver made a U-turn, stepped on the gas and struck Sam. The teenager was pinned against the fence and his right arm was severed "completely," a police source told PIX11.

"He technically did disarm him," a police source said.

Missing his arm, Sam tried to jump on an MTA bus, where he demanded a MetroCard. Just then, Pierre yanked the teenager off the bus and told the driver he'd robbed him. Then Sam escaped his clutches again and ran home, where he collapsed outside, a police source said.

An ambulance took Sam— and his severed arm — to a Brookdale Hospital. The teen was listed as critical but stable condition. Doctors surgically reattached his arm Friday night, but are not yet sure if the operation was successful, a police source said.

Pierre was arraigned Saturday on attempted murder charges. He is being held on $100,000 bond.

Pierre's relatives said his actions were done in self-defense.

"He was just there to help support his family," Pierre's cousin said. "What would you do if someone pulled a gun on you?"
