The CCWS General Meeting on Tuesday, July 29, features Morro Bay artist Kim Winberry demonstrating uses of watercolor and ink together.

“In the sun-drenched landscapes of the Central Coast of California, I discovered a vibrant community that embraces creativity and self-expression. This newfound sense of belonging has ignited a spark in my artistry, allowing my work to resonate deeply with those around me. The shared passion for art and the encouragement from fellow creators have enriched my perspective, inspiring me to explore themes that reflect our collective experiences. As I connect with local artists and engage in collaborative projects, my art not only flourishes but also finds its place among the hearts of those who appreciate the beauty of our surroundings. I combine ink and watercolors and create paintings from my imagination and nature.

“Now that I have a new and welcoming community, I am finding ways to connect and contribute to the community through various local initiatives and activities.

Participating in neighborhood events, volunteering at local organizations, and engaging in community discussions have enriched my experience and helped forge meaningful relationships. By sharing my skills and interests, I aim to support projects that enhance our shared environment, foster collaboration among residents, and build a sense of belonging for everyone. This journey of connection not only brings a sense of fulfillment but also allows me to give back to the community that has embraced me.”
