Tomorrow's MEETING on Tuesday, June 24 features local artist Liz Moore demonstrating how to use masking fluid to help create reflections in water.

Liz received a BFA from Northern Arizona University in 1980 and began work as a graphic designer for newspapers, including the SLO Telegram-Tribune. Some of her early freelance illustrative work that tells the history of Los Osos can be seen in the signs along the Elfin Forest boardwalk.

In 2000, Liz began teaching multi-media at Morro Bay High School, including design, drawing, painting, photography, and videography. From 2017-2022, she was a Teacher on Special Assignment for Career Technical Education, which is hands-on, job-based education. Liz earned an exemplary award in 2012 from California Art Educators for combining art and technology.

Now retired, Liz is free to focus on her love of watercolor, the ocean, and swimming. She lives in Los Osos with her husband and cat, painting local scenes and people.

Presentation at 1:30, SLO UMC Wesley Room, 1515 Fredericks St., SLO.
