Consent for Telehealth Services

Telehealth is typically an electronic transmission of data, using video calling, using technologies provided by the electronic health record, for improved patient access and convenience, which can result in a better patient care experience. During the communication, correct patient identification and confirmation of your practitioner and their credentials will be ensured.

Telehealth does have some considerations:

The inability to have direct, physical contact with the patient is a primary difference between telehealth and direct in-person service delivery. The patient agrees that the practitioner determines whether or not the condition being diagnosed and/or treated is appropriate for a telemedicine encounter.

In addition, the quality of transmitted data may affect the quality of services provided by the provider. The patient agrees to hold the practitioner Dr Liliya Gershengoren harmless for information lost due to technical failures.

The practice may, in some cases, be required to forward patient-identifiable information to a third party, for instance upon request by your insurance company. This is not different than the requirements for other non-telehealth medical records.

I understand and agree with the above, and consent to using telehealth with Dr Gershengoren
