WHAT ARE THE BENEFITS...

builds bridges OVER BARRIERS

Through events, teens are able to connect with other military friends from other areas and units. Communicating with other likeminded military youth can help teens become resilient and builds a sense of community among our National Guard youth.

boosts their CONFIDENCE

The youth council receive training in resilience and leadership throughout the year. They also promote military children and any issues within their local schools and communities. Volunteer hours can be included on college applications and job applications.

greatly EDUCATES

Because of the training the teens receive it gives them a chance to share information with other teens. It also helps them reach out to their academic experts within their schools.

unleashes POTENTIAL

Past youth council members have graduated from numerous universities with degrees in education, marketing, design and others.
