Spotlight Story

Hands-On Science: Zoology Students Conduct Earthworm Dissection

Our Zoology students kicked off their practical lab series this September with their very first dissection of the academic year! Working through an anatomy lab, scholars dissected earthworms to examine internal organ systems, observe segmented structures, and apply proper laboratory techniques.

This interactive experience provided students with a foundational understanding of comparative anatomy while encouraging scientific inquiry, precision, and collaboration. The energy in the lab was electric as scholars stepped into the role of young researchers, setting a high standard for hands-on learning in the months ahead.

September has been an invigorating, high-energy month across our campus! From hands-on scientific discovery in our labs to teamwork and school pride as we prepare our space for the upcoming fall season, our scholars continue to demonstrate remarkable growth, curiosity, and leadership.

As we look ahead, we are especially focused on guiding and uplifting our Senior Class as they take decisive steps toward their futures. Watching their dedication during college prep month fills us with immense pride. Thank you for your continued partnership as we cultivate a community of excellence, restore confidence, and empower every student to reach their full potential.

Class of 2027: Common App & SAT Prep Month

This month officially marked Common App & SAT Prep Month for our pioneering Graduating Class of 2027! Seniors engaged in targeted workshops focused on:

- College Application Portals: Setting up Common App profiles, structuring personal statements, and organizing application deadlines.
- SAT Strategy Sessions: Practicing test-taking tactics, reviewing math and verbal concepts, and building confidence for upcoming test dates.
- Post-Secondary Planning: Exploring college majors, career pathways, and scholarship opportunities.

We encourage all Class of 2027 families to review application timelines together and reach out to the administrative team with any questions as we support our seniors through every milestone of their final high school journey!
