WHAT PRINTING TYPE IS RIGHT FOR ME?

SCREEN PRINTING, DTG or DTF?

Screen printing offers a great value on 1-3 simple solid color graphics on run sizes greater than 48 pieces.

Digital printing truly excels in cost and print quality on full color detailed images on short run orders 1 to 288 pieces.

EXAMPLES OF DIGITAL OR SCREEN DESIGNS

The images above are examples of what types of designs are the best use case for each printing method.

WHAT IS SCREEN PRINTING?

Screen Printing

Screen printing applies plastisol ink to the garment by pushing it through a fine mesh screen using a squeegee. A separate screen is created for each color in the design, allowing the ink to be applied cleanly and consistently.

Each color is printed and registered layer by layer, then cured in a textile dryer to permanently bond the ink to the fabric. This process produces durable, vibrant prints and offers exceptional value for simple, bold graphics on larger production runs.

Best for: 1-3 color designs, bold graphics, larger quantities, long-lasting prints. Up to 12 color printing is available.

WHAT IS DIGITAL PRINTING?

Direct to Garment (DTG) Digital Printing

Direct to Garment Digital Printing (DTG) uses specialized inkjet technology to print eco-friendly, water-based inks directly into the fabric of the garment. A pretreatment layer allows the ink to properly bond, and the print is then cured in a textile dryer.

DTG produces vibrant, full-color prints with a soft hand feel, making it an excellent choice for retail-quality shirts, detailed artwork, and short to mid-run orders.

Best for: Full-color designs, detailed artwork, soft retail prints, 1-288 pieces.

Direct to Film (DTF) Digital Transfer Printing

Direct to Film (DTF) printing transfers your artwork onto a specialized film, which is then heat-applied to the garment. This process produces bold, full-color graphics with excellent durability and consistent results across a wide range of garment types.

DTF is especially effective on short runs, specialty garments, and fabrics where DTG or screen printing may not be ideal, offering flexibility without sacrificing print quality.

Best for: Short runs, specialty garments, mixed fabrics, bold full-color designs.

DTG excels in softness and retail feel, while DTF shines in versatility and durability across a wide range of garments.
