

About the Months of June & July...

June is the sixth month of the year in the Julian and Gregorian calendars and the second month to have the length of 30 days. June contains the summer solstice in the Northern Hemisphere, the day with the most daylight hours, and the winter solstice in the Southern Hemisphere, the day with the fewest daylight hours (excluding polar regions in both cases).

June symbols

- June's birthstones are pearl, alexandrite and moonstone.
- The birth flowers are rose and honeysuckle.
- The zodiac signs for the month of June are Gemini (until June 20) and Cancer (from June 21 onwards).

July is the seventh month of the year (between June and August) in the Julian and Gregorian Calendars and the fourth month to have the length of 31 days. It was named by the Roman Senate in honour of the Roman general, Julius Caesar, it being the month of his birth. Prior to that, it was called Quintilis.

July symbols

- July's birthstone is the ruby, which symbolizes contentment.
- Its birth flowers are the Larkspur or the Water Lily.
- The zodiac signs for the month of July are Cancer (until July 22) and Leo (July 23 onwards).

SOME NOTABLE JUNE and JULY BIRTHDAYS:

June: Marilyn Monroe (1), Brigham Young (1), Frank Lloyd Wright (8), Donald Trump (14), Errol Flynn (20), John Dillinger (27), Helen Keller (27) and Michael Phelps (30)

July: John D. Rockefeller (8), Julius Caesar (13), Red Skelton (13), Alexander the Great (20), Ernest Hemingway (21), Henry Ford (30), and Henry David Thoreau (30)

THE PANAMA HAT

The name "Panama hat" often brings to mind images of sunshine and paradise. The story behind the iconic Panama hat goes back to the mid-1800s. Despite the exotic name that has made Panama hats a global fashion sensation for nearly 200 years, they actually originate in Ecuador.

The Panama Hat: An Ecuadorian Invention A true Panama hat is hand woven with toquilla palm fibers by skilled artisans in Ecuador. A majority of Panama hats come from the Ecuadorian province of Manabi which contains the villages of Montecristi and Cuenca. Historically, throughout Central and South America, "Panama hats" were often referred to as "Jipijapas." As its most popular export, Ecuador takes great pride in Panama hats. Since most people feel a Panama hat would logically come from Panama, Ecuador hardly gets credit for the invention or production of the famous hat. In fact, when Panama hats first appeared at the 1855 World Fair in Paris, Ecuador was never mentioned in the World Fair catalog.

The Hat Travels to Panama to Strike Gold

Ecuador wasn't a high-traffic tourist destination during the 1850s. As a clever business decision, the hat makers took their stylish accessories to the busy trade center of Panama. There, the hat makers struck gold. They sold hundreds of hats to gold prospectors traveling through Panama on their way to California during the historic Californian Gold Rush. Travelers would tell people admiring their unique hats that they bought them in Panama. So, the hats quickly became known as "Panama hats."

The Famous Hat of the Panama Canal People have favored Panama hats for their wide brims, comfort, and lightweight straw fibers from the very beginning. During the construction of the Panama Canal that began in the 1880s, hardworking canal workers wore the hats to keep them protected from the heat of the sun. Photographs of Panama Canal workers wearing their special hats quickly circulated around the world, causing people to label the Ecuadorian headpieces as "Panama hats." In 1906, a famous image was taken of President Theodore Roosevelt proudly wearing his hand woven straw hat during his visit to the Panama Canal. Americans have called them "Panama hats" ever since.

People across the world have enjoyed the authentically Ecuadorian hat for centuries. Regardless of their name, Panama hats are a perfect travel accessory with a history as unique as their iconic design.

THE MINUTES... JUNE 2017

Yours in service,

Jerry Lipinski, Governor IL/WI District

SERTOMAN OF THE YEAR

The Sertoman of the Year Award is the top recognition that a club can give to one of its members. It's based on the member's contributions to Sertoma and the community.

At the recent August dinner meeting held at Bella Mia, Action Sertoma was proud to recognize Anita Flassig for her outstanding achievements, enthusiasm, hard work and dedication to Sertoma. Club treasurer, John Parker, conducted the ceremony and presented the award to Anita.

Anita joined Action Sertoma in 2009 and shortly thereafter became the club's Sergeant-at-Arms. She also was successful in establishing two Serteen Clubs and serves as both the Serteen Club's Liaison and Advisor. Anita regularly participates in our fundraising activities and spends many hours soliciting local businesses in the Frankfort area for donations and sponsorships.

In addition to her work with Action Sertoma, Anita is an active member of the St. Anthony parish community and also raises funds for other worth organizations such as Tri-County Special Education.

Anita's never-ending commitment to helping others and her tireless work ethic make her the perfect selection as our Sertoman of the Year. Congratulations to Anita!!!!

Studies show link between hearing loss, mental decline

Could hearing loss have a link to dementia?

Hearing loss is so common that it's long been considered a normal part of the aging process and no great cause for alarm. But studies from Johns Hopkins University have found links between hearing loss, cognitive decline and dementia. That means that it may be a greater health threat than imagined and that measures as simple as hearing aids could have a huge influence on healthy brain function. "Hearing loss shouldn't be considered an inconsequential part of aging," said Dr. Frank Lin, assistant professor at Johns Hopkins and an otologist and epidemiologist who studies the effects of hearing loss on older adults.

In one study involving nearly 2,000 men and women age 75-84, Lin and his colleagues found that over six years, cognitive abilities (including memory and concentration) of those with hearing loss declined 30 to 40 percent faster than in people with normal hearing. A 2011 study of some 600 older adults found that those with hearing loss at the beginning of the study were more likely to develop dementia than adults with normal hearing. In fact, the more severe the hearing loss, the more likely they were to develop dementia; volunteers with mild, moderate and severe loss were two, three and five times more likely to develop dementia than those with normal hearing.

Another study by Lin and his colleagues found accelerated rates of brain atrophy in people with impaired hearing compared with those who had normal hearing. In addition, they linked hearing loss to "deep episodes of stress, depression or bad mood," an increased risk of hospitalization and an increase in the risk of falls.

The link is backed by other researchers. Dr. Richard Gurgel, assistant professor of otolaryngology-head and neck surgery at University of Utah Health Care, studied more than 4,400 men and women 65 and older; those with hearing loss at the beginning of the study (published in 2014) developed dementia at a higher rate and earlier than those without hearing loss. "His research has been fantastic," Gurgel said of Lin's work. "It's energized our field and brought this issue to the forefront. He's been a real pioneer in this area."

Gurgel, Lin and others are now focused on finding out whether hearing loss causes dementia or is related to dementia. "Dementia has so many causes. I think hearing loss could be a very important component, but there are certainly a lot of factors that play into dementia," Gurgel said. "Those data (from Lin's studies) are very, very solid," said Dr. Arthur Wingfield, professor of neuroscience at Brandeis University. He called Lin's findings "provocative and interesting." "But if someone has an age-related hearing loss, they shouldn't say, 'Oh my goodness, I'm going to get Alzheimer's disease.' It's not a one-on-one, perfect correlation," Wingfield said. "There are many people who develop an age-related hearing loss and live a long life, cognitively intact. But the correlation (between hearing acuity and cognitive function) is there."

A rather fine commencement address by Chief Justice John G. Roberts Jr.

It was the ninth-grade commencement address for the Cardigan Mountain School, an elite boarding school for boys grades six through nine. Sitting up front under a large white tent as John Glover Roberts Jr. took the stage was graduating student John Glover Roberts III.

In Canaan, N.H., Head of School Christopher Day said, the 17th chief justice of the United States would always be known as the dad of “our Cardigan Cougar Jack.”

Roberts’s commencement address was not publicized in advance, but it was recorded by the school, uploaded to YouTube and is slowly gaining attention. One person wrote, “I’m a Democrat and I can’t stand the guy’s views, but I was in tears.”

There is nothing about the Supreme Court or the law in the short speech, although each graduating Cougar received an autographed, pocket-size Constitution along with his certificate.

Instead, the address was personal, understated and popular probably because it touched on universal themes, such as a parent’s worry about whether he or she is making the right decisions for their child.

Driving through the gates after leaving a student at Cardigan, Roberts said, parents travel a “trail of tears” to an “emptier and lonelier house.”

Roberts is considered one of the Supreme Court’s better writers, and his public addresses show a quick wit and professional timing. He first asked the Cardigan students to turn and applaud their parents and others who had guided them.

He joked that he would later be able to report that his speech was “interrupted by applause.”

Success, he reminded them, comes to those who are unafraid to fail. “And if you did fail, you got up and tried again. And if you failed again, you got up and tried again. And if you failed again — it might be time to think about doing something else.”

Roberts said commencement addresses customarily wish graduates success. He thought it better for them to experience challenges.

“From time to time in the years to come, I hope you will be treated unfairly,” Roberts said, “so that you will come to learn the value of justice.”

Betrayal “will teach you the importance of loyalty.” Loneliness will instruct people not to “take friends for granted.” Pain will cause someone “to learn compassion.”

“I wish you bad luck — again, from time to time — so that you will be conscious of the role of chance in life,” Roberts said. “And understand that your success is not completely deserved, and that the failure of others is not completely deserved, either.”

“But you are also privileged young men, and if you weren’t privileged when you came here, you’re privileged now because you have been here,” Roberts said. “My advice is: Don’t act like it.”

He urged them, at their next school, to introduce themselves to the people “raking the leaves, shoveling the snow or emptying the trash.” Learn their names, smile and call them by name. “The worst thing that will happen is you will become known as the young man who smiles and says hello,” he said.

Another thing:

“You’ve been at a school with just boys. Most of you will be going to a school with girls,” Roberts said.

Long pause.

“I have no advice for you.”

In his speech, Roberts quoted Socrates and, not surprisingly, he ended it with the words of “the great American philosopher, Bob Dylan.”

Roberts has quoted Dylan in judicial opinions, and he’s not alone. The New York Times a few years ago noted a study that found Dylan the most-quoted songwriter in judicial opinions, and said Roberts had “opened the floodgates” by quoting the Bard of Minnesota in a 2008 dissent.

The song he quoted at the commencement speech was “Forever Young.” Roberts is an unusual parent. Now 62, he and Jane married rather late in life. Their contemporaries are welcoming grandchildren, while they have two high-schoolers, Jack and his sister Josephine.

“May you build a ladder to the stars

And climb on every rung

May you stay forever young.”

The wishes expressed by Dylan for his son, Jesse, are “beautiful, they’re timeless, they’re universal,” Roberts said.

But the phrase that gives the song its title and refrain — forever young — is unrealistic, the chief justice said. It can’t come true.

“That wish is a parent’s lament,” he said.

Editor’s Thoughts

“Summertime and the living is easy”.....How about it! Summertime, in case you didn’t know, is an aria composed in 1934 by George Gershwin for the 1935 opera Porgy and Bess. The lyrics are by DuBose Heyward, the author of the novel Porgy on which the opera was based, although the song is also co-credited to Ira Gershwin. Summer takes too long to get here and leaves us far too soon. Live it like you own it. Summertime is the time for all events outside...vacations, the beach, the pool, ballgames, golf, tennis and whatever else you decide to do. Do it before it leaves you.

Like the summer and all of its easy living, let’s not forget about Sertoma and all of the things that can be done with and for Sertoma during this time. It’s the perfect time to get out and spread the name of Sertoma and let everyone know what Sertoma is all about. Let’s get out and spread the cheer! Check out the IL/WI District Sertoma Governor’s Newsletter to plan for the Great Lakes Regional Convention in September and to attend PAC meeting at the Sertoma Centre on August 24th.

As always, please visit our new Action Sertoma at <http://www.actionsertoma.net> and also please visit our Facebook page and “like” what you see.

Again, I invite all Sertomans to comment about the content of not only the Newsletter, but also the website. Any ideas that you have about anything that you would like to see or have included would be welcome, as well as any of your own contributions.

I looked forward to your comments, suggestions and ideas.

ACTION SERTOMA 17TH ANNUAL GOLF OUTING

Once again, the best golf outing in the south suburbs and tribute to Frank Oakes was held at Silver Lake Country Club on July 2nd. Mother nature did her best to try and interrupt the event with some scattered showers, but she had to step aside after a brief interlude and let the event rock on. Early registration and a continental breakfast got things off to a fast start as did the Bloody Mary bar that was sponsored by the Fioretti family. Who can't play better with a nice and spicy BM in your belly lubricating your swing?

A shotgun start at 9:00 got things rolling with many interesting games of skill taking place on the course as provided by SMT Golf Outing Services. How can one go wrong with teeing off with a potato gun golf ball launcher or trying to chip a ball into the toilet of a porta-potty?

After golf, and during the cocktail hour, the patrons (are we snooty enough to go that route and not have the "Masters" feel slighted?) were able to peruse the items that had been donated and formed the basis of the Silent Auction. Numerous baskets of goodies, tickets to various events, an off-road bicycle and bottles of wine were up for auction. A cooler that was being raffled off was filled to the brim with many different types of liquor and a split the pot raffle added to the festivities.

All of this led up to the finale...the live auction. The first item up for auction was a Chicago Blackhawks golf bag that was loaded with a collection of Hawks golf related items. But the pièce de résistance was the bag having been autographed by Blackhawk Hall of Famer, Denis Savard making it a priceless acquisition for any Hawk's fan. The winner, after some tough back and forth bidding was Mike Ojemark. Looks like time for Mike to get a raise to pay for the bag. Joe Racine....are you listening?????

Our second live auction item was 4 tickets (Lexus level) and parking for an upcoming Blackhawks game. What a great way to watch the march to the Stanley Cup! The bidding started out hot and heavy and boiled down to a slugfest between 2 of our wonderful members with Lorraine Schultz landing the knockout bid and taking home the tickets.

While there are far too many people to thank for all of their efforts and the time spent on this event, special recognition is necessary for D.J. Fioretti, the committee chair and Kristine Kalnins, who dealt with the auction activities. One other person needs our a big Sertoma thanks...Gene Esposito, Jr. and Espo Engineering for being the Gold Sponsor for the event. It couldn't have happened without his generosity.

It was a great event despite the little sprinkle and will be even better next year. Now on to ROCKTOBERFEST!!!
