

Hello, Friends!

Happy Friday!

What a week! I spent the week catching up after being in Rangeley for a week, plus dealing with a bit of a cold. I was able to take in a few walks, and caught this great little waterfall off of the trail near my house. We received a lot of rain this fall. Speaking of precipitation, it seems we had perfect timing for our Fall Quilt Camp, as I hear Rangeley received more than snow flurries this week.

What a fabulous week we had last week!

Retreats are so special, you never know what you are going to learn. I'm not just talking about quilting either. First off, it is so nice to spend time with people of like interest, and not hear "all you do is quilt", "Really? You spend the day quilting?", and so on.... I always hope my retreaters learn as much from me as I learn from them at each retreat.

Fall Quilt Camp at Rangeley 2018

It is a special bond us quilters have, it makes it so easy to share, whether it is chatting while we stitch, conversing while pressing (note I did not say ironing), chat over cocktails, or have a deep conversation over dinner. It can be sharing a love for music and introducing each other to new artist. Trying to determine your "go to" karaoke song. Laughing at a funny dance move or how people mispronounce your name. Or something serious, like sharing one of your struggles in life, and being able to help another with a similar struggle. I love retreats!

Special thanks to Carol & Dan for another FABULOUS Fall Quilt Camp!

The best moments usually come, when the hosts or I've lost control.... or maybe better said that we've empowered people and they feel comfortable. :) Love this photo!

Cal Pal

Cal Pal is happy I'm home for a few weeks. He is cuddled up today in the sun room, taking a break from Squirrel and Chipmunk watching, waiting for the delivery man.

See, I have two sewing areas all broken down, waiting for my new Koala table to be delivered. They say the third time's a charm, hopefully they can get it into my sunroom without dropping it. Then, hopefully, I can get everything put back together and get sewing on my Pfaff Performance Icon, dropped into the table! I love leveled sewing!

Please make sure to head over to my Blog and check out my tips for making Diamond Rects! Remember, you need to download this week's block by Thursday, November 1st!

You will want to be sure to check out next week's newsletter as I reveal my newsletter/blog project for next year!

Be sure to post those finished blocks and Quilts on the Timeless with a Twist Facebook page!

Have a great weekend! I'm off to see Keith Urban tomorrow night in Brooklyn! Can't wait!

Keep Stitching, Michelle
