

Creating Community

ART105 OPEN STUDIO

When we opened our doors in December, the studio became part gallery, part gathering place—work on the walls, tools in the open, and conversations as vital as the finished pieces. Calling it an open studio invited people to look closer, offering the community an intimate, human experience of art beyond the white-wall distance.

On December 13th, Egg Drop Theatre and invited performers raided the ART105 costume and prop room to reveal characters waiting to emerge. The playful search became The Parade of Fools, a roving performance through Old Town Pasadena that surprised holiday shoppers.

Crosswalks and courtyards turned into Theatre-in-the-Round stages, storefronts into playful targets, and the streets came alive with costume and performance art—sparking curiosity and launching a new ART105 tradition.

Convertible Play House closed Open Studio with improvised, polyrhythmic soundscapes spun from analogue synths, loops, contact mics, and acoustic instruments, merging with the surrounding artwork to transform the gallery into an immersive shared experience.

What began as a private groove became music unfolding in real time with an ever-shifting audience. The public jam offered a welcome pause from rehearsals for their new multimedia production, Plato's Cave (working title), now moving toward the stage.

8-Part Series Keys for Creativity

Doug Hammett shared all 48 chapters of Keys for Creativity: Unlock Your Potential on Instagram through a creative series of 8 themed sessions, each covering 6 chapters with reflections and prompts. The sessions — The Container, Stay Open, Go Wild, Differences, Get Unstuck, Discernment, Being Big, and Story — offered short reels that distilled the book's ideas and invited viewers to reflect on their own creative process.
