

Sneak a Peek into Art105

Since the beginning of the year, ART105 has continued to grow as a creative space for visual art, theater, and music. One of the questions we're often asked is, "What goes on in there when you're not having an art show?" We wanted to share a glimpse of what has been happening behind closed doors.

Egg Drop Theater has been exploring improvisation, character work, movement, masks, costumes, and experimental staging. Through music, lighting, props, and playful formats—from shamanic drumming journeys to The Dating Game—the group discovers new ways of bringing imagination to life through performance.

Convertible Play House, an acoustic/electronic music group, is developing a new multimedia performance titled "Plato's Cave." Combining original music, video projection, and theatrical staging, the performance will offer the audience an opportunity to witness the trappings of the mind.

In the studio, in-house artists Brad Davis and Doug Hammett continue their exploration of painting and sculpture. Brad works with slate and found materials to create textured surfaces where nature and culture intersect, while Doug has been developing hand-sculpted abstract forms that emerge more naturally in three dimensions than on canvas.

We hope you enjoy this glimpse into the art, theater, and music unfolding at ART105.
