

AHDT Guideline for Projects Collaboration

Africa Healthcare Development Trust (AHDT) is a UK registered charity (Charity registration number 1118851).

<http://www.ahdt.co.uk>

The aim of the charity is to help improve the health of the less privileged. Our activities have been in the poorer parts of Nigeria, providing treatment for various medical conditions to host communities, training local healthcare staff and also helping with health resource management.

We work in teams in collaboration with some of our volunteer colleagues from within Nigeria and carry out cataract eye surgery, general surgical operations, gynaecological surgery including for women who have been suffering from vesico-vaginal fistula (VVF) and constantly leaking urine (sometimes with faeces) from complications of child birth.

There is also training of hospital and community health staff involved in the delivery of babies on how to resuscitate babies at birth that may be in difficulties and have not been able to establish spontaneous breathing. We also treat various childhood and adult medical conditions and run a general screening programme for hypertension and diabetes to communities that we visit. Infection Prevention and control practices including hand hygiene and appropriate use of personal protective equipment (PPEs) are also re-emphasized at each level of engagement.

AHDT is a healthcare charity and is not an NGO (non-governmental organization). As a charity our funding is limited to contributions from members. This means that whenever we embark on a health project we are reliant on donations from philanthropists and other organisations.

We have over the last 20 years carried out health improvement projects in Jigawa, Kano, Gombe, Niger and have an existing service improvement initiative and training with Ahmadu Bello University Teaching Hospital (ABUTH) Zaria, Nigeria.

Contribution of time/expertise by UK-based AHDT members towards any project is free.

If you would like to partner with us to bring about improvement in the health of your local community, kindly contact us by email available from our website <http://www.ahdt.co.uk>

Below for your perusal, is a schematic diagram that explains the process of collaboration with AHDT.

We will like to thank you for your interest in our activities.
