Hi, my name is Aaron M Lambert and I'm starting a GoFundMe page. A fundraiser to regain the ability, (mobility & dignity) that I've lost due in part to my poor living conditions and lack of meaningful or results-driven resources (solutions), that could have prevented my failing health and more importantly, nearly jeopardized what was within my reach, a continued "Life Worth Living" pursuant, The American Dream.

All my life I've been athletic, enjoying a healthy lifestyle, which included working out in the gym, playing tennis, mountain biking, and my true passion, trail running.

However, it's no secret and if you know me, then you also know that for nearly the last 5 years, the aforementioned lifestyle has been difficult to maintain with any level of consistency.

It's not impossible, as some might think, including me at times, but being homeless or as I prefer, in transition comes with its own unique set of challenges, including a default lifestyle that is not conducive to my goals, dreams, aspirations, core values, and my higher self. What I'm referring to is a spiritual life, when saying my higher self...

I won't go into detail about the negative effects of the homeless lifestyle or how the environment has further complicated my life and health, or the numerous bad choices that I've made.

Today, and every day, I take responsibility for my choices.

I will, however, also share that I'm dealing with Upper Right Congestive Heart Failure and Pulmonary Hypertension.

Thankfully, it doesn't appear to be of the Hepatocellular Liver Carcinoma diagnosis, as indicated by a previous sonogram (August 2022) and the more recent, Fatty Liver diagnosis (November 2022). However, Heart Failure is no joke.

There are other diagnoses since August of this year, making for a total of 6 and of which, each causing individual harm to my well-being. Collectively they had greater power, and the potential to be terminal (renal failure).

I didn't want to convey negativity or overemphasize the bleakness, a hopelessness that I have been enduring for some time. For that reason, I'll refrain from talking about the other diagnosis and the life-changing effect, it has had on me any further.

Today is a new day and this is my story...

It's hard for me to accept that I was near the best health of my life just before the onset of the Covid Pandemic. I had hope, joy and at times, happiness. That, amongst new aspirations and business endeavors, that I worked on with a blazing passion, my life was on fire and my aspirations had true meaning. So much meaning that I often worked 16 to 18-hour days for about 3 months straight. Other times, 24 hours around the clock.

That's how much I believed in what I was doing for not just me, but for the benefit of others. That is what keeps me inspired...

Yet at 48, both my mind, body and soul were finally in balance. A harmony had been created after emerging from homelessness, just 12 months prior. Before that brief stretch of having shelter, I was homeless for nearly 3 years.

When not burning the candle at both ends, I was often trail-running, lifting weights at the gym, spending time in nature, connecting with my spirituality and developing my greater guiding sense, which is a set of principles and philosophies. "The ArcLight Philosophy."

I didn't know it then, but I do now, that because of my spiritual work, connection to my environment and nature (mother nature or EvE), in combination with the general strategies on business longevity, I had been creating the working blueprints to a new framework that was changing my life and quite possibly, shaping things to come in our communities nationwide.

This framework is the original strategy for Life as an EcoSystem (LaaES) and EcoSystem as a Service (EaaS). A community sustainable model and socially responsible investment (SRI). I commonly refer to this as the first of its kind and as an Integrated Life and Services Platform.

A Modern Marvel of Sustainability...MnM is.

When I think of how I felt or viewed my life during that time, I would often describe or associate myself with the likes of being a machine. Perhaps of The Six Million (billion) Dollar Man indestructible type. I was working and going for broke, literally, but more in the likeness of The Terminator. Today, I'm still broke and in all inward-consuming termination of my life preoccupies my mind and causes tremendous ATSD (acute traumatic stress disorder). Not to mention veracious insomnia, but thankfully my mind is clearer than it ever was and my fortitude to succeed in tack.

My health conditions and the above are a direct causality, or as I prefer...a root cause of the homeless lifestyle, by choice or inability to affect change in my own life, my course of actions herein, now to re-emerge, before my death, do us part.

As a result, of both my and others' actions, who can affect change and don't, so I exist without change and the unraveling of my health, taking front and center stage.

My life hasn't changed, but I'm trying to affect it. This is the unplanned, first step of many to come...

During the time of the Covid Pandemic, my life began to change dramatically. Represented as dominos, neatly stacked and created for dramatic effect, collectively these dominos were the pillars of my new life, supporting my passion, but for unforeseen reasons, my dominos began to fall in succession, seemingly stripping me of my original miracle that I had experienced, just 12 months prior and my first re-emergence from being homeless.

Effectively, this left me once again, without what I had come to appreciate, and had been eternally grateful for, "safe and productive housing."

Housing is more than key, it's "The Answer" and of which, knocking down these barriers increases everyone's probability of success, exponentially.

Knock, knock...who's there? A life worth living...

With my housing now ceasing to be available. With nowhere to turn, I once again took shelter in Mother Nature and my life worth living on hold.

The thought or reality of being homeless a 2nd time after what I had started to achieve again in life, seemed totally improbable at most and too much to bear. At least, it was for me.

I don't expect anyone or any one thing to solve my homeless crisis. That's a complex problem but ironically requires simple solutions. Financial support for several months, and the exact type of resources for a high probability of success. As I've learned, up to a year, depending on the individual(s) needs.

However, this is about me getting my mobility back, an ability or dignity to be once again, independent and accomplish everyday tasks on my own.

Now and at this very moment, the single most important tool (resource) a luxury that most of us take for granted is the ability to be independent and mobile. Now we're finally at the crux of my immediate problem and or my real, planned reason for what I hope is being received, as a sincere request for support or more commonly referred to as a "hand-up".

This is a plea to those compassionate and charitable individuals.

So, what has life been like? It's been a challenge, to say the least, and getting harder with each passing week.

For several months now, I haven't been able to grocery shop, do laundry, run errands or go to doctor's appointments on my own or without great difficulty.

I used to be very efficient and productive, often completing 3 to 5 goals a day. Now, I'm lucky to complete 1 without help when requiring a vehicle or in my case, a bicycle with a rack for storage.

Right now, you're asking yourself...all of the above information for just a bike?

Here's the meaningful importance to me and how others' choices can affect change. A Big Thank You in Advance, From My Big Broken Heart.

Having an electric bike with racks would profoundly change my life. I would regain my sense of independence, and confidence in knowing I can accomplish tasks on my own and honestly, a returning sense of identity. A dignity that was lost when my new 2022 TREK Roscoe was stolen.

That bike was my everything. The only thing I had to keep pace with my then-busy life and desire to escape homelessness. I was lost without it.

This new bike...It's one big step forward in my "in-transition" strategy. Having Mobility or Wings beneath my feet, I just might take flight again and realize the American Dream.

Thanks for sticking it out and reading to this point. I realize this was long and probably arduous to read, but I prefer to be transparent and inclusive of my reality, allowing you to feel confident about making an informed charitable decision. If you still have questions, just ask. My life has become an open book.

If you're like me, compassion is not a lost art. Nor is the ability of a community to take part. Thank you for your support and generosity.

Your donation goes towards the purchase of a Pedego Electric Bicycle. The entry-level bike is $1900, but the one that is best suited for my needs is $3500.

However, I also have a stretch goal of $100,000. What good is having a great new bike (an investment) that I cannot insure living as I do? It's the very reason why I could not insure my TREK, although it was stolen from Food4Less.

The stretch goal, if obtained, would pave the way into a works-in-progress, that I essentially had to walk away from over the last 22 months as contained herein and at the beginning of this fundraiser.

However, I have been working on a strategic relaunch and branding. I learned much from my first attempts and I'm confident that some form of my "hobby?" endeavors will soon be funded, acquired and or merged into something special.

Websites are operational for investors, partners and the general public. However, the investor's version will not be accessible to the general public and contain confidential business strategies, key personnel, platform technologies, etc.

Feel free to review the public versions at the top and hopefully, be inspired to make either a charitable contribution here or within the corresponding business hobby endeavors linking back to this GoFundMe page.

Please keep in mind that LambertHearts.org Inc is the only one in which your contribution can be claimed on your personal or business taxes as a deduction, due to the business being a public benefit company and or a not-for-profit charity.

This all assumes that a 2nd miracle takes place. The new ability to peddle my grateful butt to the trolley, Amtrack or other means of transportation. Why not a car? Maybe someday, but I like the idea of setting the standard high for my health and as a carbon-free human being, ensuring that I do my part in restoring and sustaining the American Dream. Ensuring it's available to all, and for generations to come.

That's Life as an EcoSystem, conceived by

Moved to Missouri on February 22nd and was residing with his Mother in a beautiful new home. Someday, he'll have a home or apartment of his own. It doesn't take much to make him happy, after all the misery and hopelessness he's endured to keep his American Dream alive and well.

I hope you don't mind the candor or truth in my prior situation, but I tried to keep things light, be happy and laugh often. Until recently, I hadn't smiled or laughed for a long time. If you know me, you know it's true, otherwise, I would cry. Which I still do, often.

Crying doesn't make me weak; it makes me human.

At this stage of my recovery, I'm convinced my doctors are off their rocker (out of their minds) and there is nothing wrong with me, my heart is strong, but I'm very much out of shape and stricken with sleep deprivation due to Insomnia. They just refuse to help me with Sleep Management and the necessary medications that work and help me sleep, recover and enjoy life as a mid-life athlete.

In a nutshell, I have a weakened Cardio Vascular System (not compromised) and merely suffer from low testosterone, which by proportions, made me more woman than a man for a while. I assure you, I was the Queen "B" or The OMEGA. Just ask my Mother. God bless her for putting up with me. God bless me for putting up with her, too.

Any doctor realizes and understands the importance of hormone replacement therapy and its positive effects on The Renal System and Overall Homogenous Manhood?

Now, once I get my hormone levels right...You Guess IT. Return to a healthy life, but of course it will take some time. I've suffered much and don't expect to return 100% and able to resume trail running, but at least with a home and a life worth living, the opportunity to make my dreams come true.

Of Course, I owe all my gifts and abilities to my higher power, which is personal to me. For that and my 2nd miracle at Life, I now and will always live each day in gratitude.

May 2nd 2023

Upon returning back to San Diego to come full circle with my previous healthcare provider and primary care providers, I've come to realize that perhaps it wasn't the diagnosis that was incorrect, it was the treatment plans.

What I mean by this is that I have spent the greater part of the last 3 weeks in and out of the ER and being admitted to the hospital, to battle back symptoms of congestive heart failure stage 3 chronic kidney disease and pulmonary hypertension. In addition to all that, those diagnosis include an additional symptom that is impossible to hide, which includes a new body abnormality consisting of 15 to 30 extra pounds of abdominal and lower extremity body fluid weight.

It is called ascites and edema, which is very difficult to remove without a hospital procedure called a paracentesis or the daily use of diuretics to not only reduce but to manage the ascites and edema fluid body retention weight.

In my case the paracentesis had been increased from once a month to now almost twice a week and the amount of diuretics required in order to remove the edema from my legs is far greater than I can manage as a homeless man, given the fact that I don't have access to labs and the proper identification of whether my kidneys are being further harmed, as a result of the diuretic use.

So, what is the next step? I hope I'm able to continue to pursue the American dream and that each of you will take this opportunity to show some compassion and make a heart felt donation, effecting change that others could have and should have long ago, but did not.

Perhaps my journey would not have been so challenging and my American Dream, set in motion long ago.

It's never to late to dream...

August 1st 2023

After returning to the transient lifestyle and my health once again quickly diminished, I've permanently moved back to Aurora Missouri and already started the incorporation of MnM ArcOne, there and with your support, I can continue this process and obtain private investor funding. Also, a positive note on my health...it's a long road, but there is finally some hope of affecting that change.

Thank you for your support!
