

Jesus Maximoff, PCC

Jesus is a seasoned global executive coach, with over 15 years of practice in complex environments. His approach is informed by over two decades of experience as a Fortune 50 senior executive, where he sat at the table in areas ranging from engineering, marketing, sales, operations and government affairs to corporate strategy development.

Background and Industry Experience

In his most recent position, before becoming an Executive Coach, Jesus worked as President and General Manager for Intel Corporation in Latin America where he oversaw the chipmaker's most significant growth expansion years. Prior to that, he served as Chief of Staff to Intel's Executive Vice President for Sales & Marketing, as the organization navigated one of its largest global restructuring and as Intel's Managing Director for the south of Europe. Jesus developed a track-record of building vibrant high impact teams across cultures, leading successful high stakes negotiations, successfully turning around businesses that were experiencing operations or performance challenges and managing P&L that exceeded revenues and profit targets. Before entering the technology field, Jesus was an innovative entrepreneur in the tourism and advertisement industry.

Focus and Expertise

As a credentialed coach, he partners with clients in a thought provoking and creative process that generates insights and actions inspiring them to achieve what they truly want, at work and in life. His clients appreciate his use of no-nonsense, direct yet compassionate and evidence-based approach, to help leaders and teams be more effective and human at work. He's an advocate for improving your thinking, refining the effectiveness of your daily conversations and getting results that matter. Jesus has lived in 8 different countries and has had the privilege to coach leaders and teams from over 38 different countries in wide variety of industries and issues.
