LOGLINE

Following a series of increasingly catastrophic first dates, Izzy discovers an online dating site with a twist: 100% satisfaction guaranteed. A shortcut to a soul mate? Possibly; if the stunning and seemingly perfect Persy has anything to say about it.

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

A comedy about fate, free will and...skateboarding. Equal parts aspiring philosopher and lovesick college sophomore, Izzy misguidedly believes the examined life and finding a soul mate are one and the same. That is Izzy's struggle. But, if we're honest, it's also very much mine, and it's been a long time since I was a college sophomore.

I'm always interested in the little double standards and hypocrisies we allow for ourselves- we want one thing, or we tell ourselves we do, but then when the thing is a little too much the way we want it, we want something else, a whole lot different. But, really, exactly the same.

This going back and forth describes Izzy's journey to the festival circuit. Shot and edited over a two year span, I have struggled to find the ideal version of the film. I think it's there. Pretty sure it's there....definitely there. Probably.

DIRECTOR BIO

Award winning director Micah Stathis was born in the Midwest and raised in Greece, in Ano Glyfada just outside of Athens.

Micah spent three years serving in the US Army, being deployed in combat in Ramadi, Iraq. He is a decorated veteran.

Micah then received his Masters in Film Studies at NYU Tisch. He has written and directed many short films, music videos and short documentaries. "The Sisters Karras" (2022) was his first feature.

Micah also has extensive experience as a television producer and technical director, working for years at MNN (Manhattan Neighborhood Network) on community events, political and policy debates, variety shows, Urban Word poetry slam, educational programming and more.

Micah has directed one feature film, The Sisters Karras, and currently has two shorts out in the world, Rest and Izzy.
