General Manager's Comments

Forty-five years ago this month, a long-haul trucker showed up at my Montana high school with a holiday care package of homemade chocolates and cookies just before Christmas in 1976. "Your Mama thought you'd like something special right about now," said Elmer Brooks, a seventy something professional mover I'd never met. It turned out Elmer, who had jet white hair and leathery skin, had met my folks in another state and asked if he could bring something to their son, seeing how he was passing right through Bozeman. It was like that in those days. I can still see him in his cowboy hat, snow swirling all around him, as he gleefully handed over a large box wrapped in bright paper. "Go on, open it," he said. I'm guessing you'll find some of your Mama's homemade cookies in there, and I haven't come this far in a blizzard to go away empty handed." As I tore into the box, layer upon layer of edible treats dazzled my eyes and lay neatly ordered between sheets of wax paper. Elmer and I stood on the side of the road, in a heavy snowfall, devouring my mom's homemade fudge, candied walnuts, divinity, dried fruits and cookies of all kinds. Then, as quickly as he'd arrived, he was gone. It strikes me that the simplest gifts I've received are the ones I cherish...a stranger's kindness by way of my parents, and a long empty highway across the high plains in winter. May your travels be safe and memorable this holiday season, and may your home always be here with us.
