This has been a year of new beginnings in many ways. We are venturing out, trying those things that have been closed down for almost two years. Family and friends are visiting, and photos of travels to far away places are showing up on Facebook and Instagram. Sports events and concerts, church services and picnics - it's all feeling like we're cautiously done with the last dangerous waves of Covid. And what better time could I choose to do the things I've always wondered about - photography as more than just a hobby that I've spent a lot of engaging with, and enjoying as I've shared the results. As long as we're off to these new beginnings, let's try some things we've never done before!

So, this message is the beginning of a new story. A process that is a bunch of activity and learning in a short period of time in some sense, but has been underway for decades in reality. And I look forward to sharing that with you, and hope you subscribe to our site and our messages to follow with me as I find out what's really involved in this new part of the story.

So what have I done?

A new website (check it out above) where I am selling prints and images. And, some real investment in learning post processing which included building software tools to enhance digital post-processing, and create what I think is a unique outcome. Color, lines, and levels of detail that I knew were in our library of 150,000 photos - and now I can see a new life for these images that I am really excited to share.

There will be lots more to add as we dig into that library, attend more events, and take advantage of lessons learned over the past 50 years of photographic travel and experience.

Mostly though, I look forward to hearing from you about your reaction to these images, and this crazy plan to embark on this journey of discovery. So, hit that subscribe button, and let's see what we find together.
