About the Baltimore African American Tourism Council of MD, Inc.

The Council is a community-based nonprofit organization co-founded in March 1996 by the late Steven Pace and Louis C. Fields. The Council's goals include the research, documentation, preservation, protection, and promotion of African American History, Culture and Tourism within the State of Maryland. BAATC is a one-stop shop for travel and tourism requests coming into the State of Maryland and other select cities. In year 2000, BAATC led to the establishment of Harriet Tubman Day in Maryland and established Tubman Day in WDC in February 2017. My newest book titled Freedom Seekers, the true story of the Underground Railroad in Baltimore is available. A young Frederick Douglass resided in Fell’s Point as a slave from 1826 until he escaped from American slavery on Monday, September 3, 1838 via the Underground Railroad. Lou Fields, President of BAATC created the Frederick Douglass Path to Freedom Walking Tour in historic Fells Point in February 2000. In 2001, C-SPAN covered the walking tour on their national TV network. On March 27, 2003 the City of Baltimore erected four historic markers honoring Douglass along the Path to Freedom Walking Tour route.

In 2005, the tour received acceptance into the National Park Service and the Maryland Network to Freedom Underground Railroad Program. In 2006, the Living Classrooms Foundation opened the Frederick Douglass-Isaac Myers Maritime Museum which is a stop on the tour.

This tour is always available daily by appointment and lasts about one hour. Tour guides lead attendees along the route where Douglass lived, worked and worshipped as well as the maritime sites and notables places in historic Fell’s Point. The tour is an excellent educational outing for students, educators, visitors, and persons interested in learning more about Baltimore’s role in immigrant, maritime, slavery, Underground Railroad and local history. The setting for the tour is in Fell's Point, Baltimore's original waterfront on the east side of the Inner Harbor. Fell’s Point features many unique retail shops, eateries, personalities and sights of old Baltimore.
