To whom it may concern,

It is my pleasure to recommend Eve Hoehl for admission to your college. I am confident that she will make an incredible impact both as a student and a teammate.

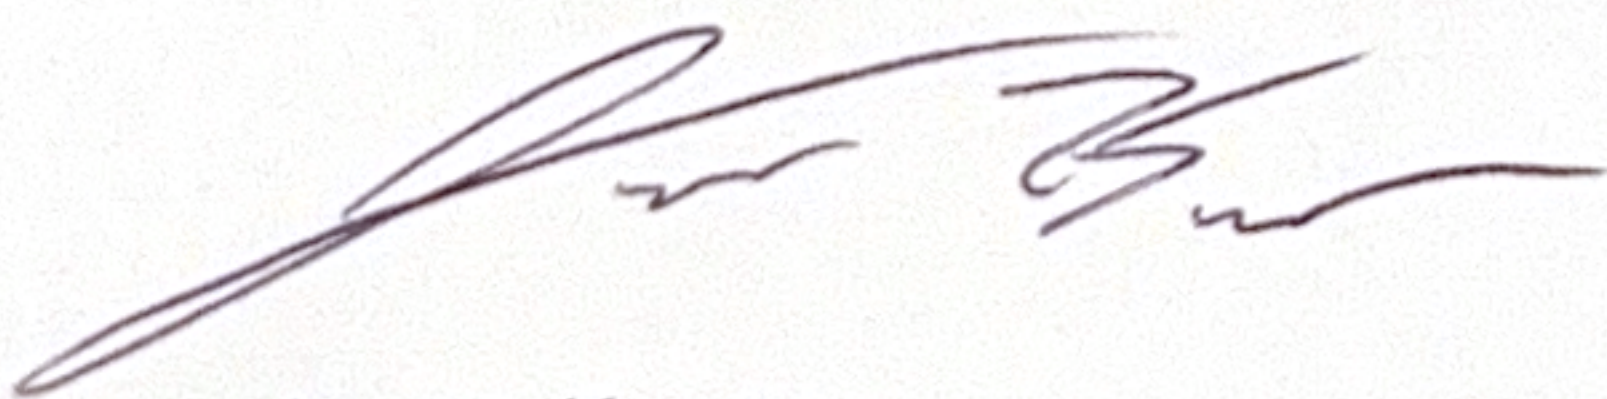

I have had the privilege of coaching Eve over multiple seasons, as well as working with her in individual lessons both on and off the ice. During that time, I have seen her grow into an exceptional athlete, teammate, and individual. From the beginning, Eve stood out for her ability to quickly understand and apply feedback. Whether it was a change in routine or a new challenge on the ice, she consistently approached tasks with maturity, asking thoughtful questions and seeking clarity to ensure she was contributing at her best.

What sets Eve apart is not just her talent, but her attitude. She never shied away from hard work or tough conversations. She regularly went out of her way to seek feedback, address any challenges head-on, and look for ways to improve—not only as a player but as a person. Her leadership extended beyond the ice; Eve consistently brought teammates together, supported others, and created a positive, inclusive atmosphere that made everyone around her better.

From a coaching perspective, watching Eve develop has been incredibly rewarding. Her dedication, resilience, and growth mindset are the qualities every coach hopes to see in an athlete. Eve is strong, courageous, professional, respectful, and well-rounded—exactly the kind of individual who will thrive in a collegiate environment.

You would be fortunate to have Eve as part of your program. I have no doubt she will bring the same determination and character to your campus that she has shown throughout her time with us.

Respectfully submitted,
