DSYPLE

Born 1983 in Annapolis, Maryland, Dsyple graduated from South River High School in 2001. But he was making music long before that. When he was just seven years old, he would listen to music with his brother, a fan of Public Enemy and Cypress Hill. Dsyple loved the sound so much he started snatching his brother's cassettes, playing them in his little cassette player, and bumping to the music. He just loved it.

Not long after, he had a near-drowning experience that messed up his nerves. He experienced bad twitches and accelerated speech. The amazing part was finding out that all those symptoms stopped when he was making music. It didn't take long for music to become his creative outlet and the main source of his self-esteem. He started making tapes in middle school, selling them to his classmates and giving concerts in his living room. He used notebook paper to create cassette covers and sold his releases for a dollar each.

From these humble beginnings as a youngster, Dsyple went on to great things. As a result of his respect for God, he toured with Christian artists Shawn Broadnax and Troop, and he worked with industry professionals such as Lecrae in a major music market.
