Medina County Juvenile and Probate Court, Juvenile Detention Center Launch New Websites

The court and detention facility websites created in-house allow for necessary updates and revisions to provide up-to-date information to the public

MEDINA – The Medina County Juvenile Detention Center website, www.MedinaJDC.org, is now up and running.

“Creating this Juvenile Detention Center website was important to help make the public more aware of this facility in our community,” Judge Dunn said.

The first official website for the detention center includes information about MCJDC administrative hours, visitation hours and a copy of the resident handbook, among other necessary information.

“I think in today’s information age, it is more important than ever, especially for public entities, to have a visible internet presence,” said MCJDC Superintendent Ron Stollar. “That seems to be the way more people find out information and as a public agency we should be as accessible as we can be. This is a step in that direction.”

In addition to a new juvenile detention center website, the Medina County Juvenile and Probate Court website also received a makeover.

“Judge Dunn wanted to make the websites more user-friendly. He really understands how technology is constantly changing and we at the court need to keep up,” said Network Administrator Mike Stiles. “The websites were created in-house so this gives us full control and allows us to make any necessary changes immediately.”

Stiles said because of frequent revisions to probate forms or local rule changes, the ability to correct the website and provide up-to-date information is important.

Both sites are now available at www.MedinaJDC.org and MedinaProbate.org.
