Quotes tagged as "one-of-us-is-lying" Showing 1-12 of 12 "I stand and hold out my hand. She gives me a skeptical look, but takes it and lets me pull her to her feet. I put my other hand in the air. 'Bronwyn Rojas, I solemnly swear not to murder you today or at any point in the future. Deal?' 'You're ridiculous,' she mutters, going even redder. 'It concerns me you're avoiding a promise not to murder me.'" — Karen M. McManus, One of Us Is Lying The phone almost slips out of my hand. Another text from Chad Posner came through while I was reading. People r fucked up. I text back, Where'd you get this? Posner writes some rando emailed a link, with the laughing-so-hard-I'm-crying emoji. He thinks it's somebody's idea of a sick joke. Which is what most people would think, if they hadn't spent an hour with a police officer asking ten different ways how peanut oil got into Simon Kelleher's cup. Along with three other people who looked guilty as hell. None of them have as much experience as I do keeping a straight face when shit's falling apart around them. At least, none of them are as good at it as me. in: Characters, Characters (Books) Edit Nathaniel "Nate" Macauley Mr. Macauley (father) Ellen Macauley (mother) Addy Prentiss Cooper Clay Bronwyn Rojas Simon Kelleher Jake Riordan Nate Macauley is a senior at Bayview High, and accused of the murder of Simon Kelleher. He is on probation for selling drugs at the start of the book, which gives him a poor reputation in the press. Physical Appearance[] Nate is described to have a tall, rangy build. He has wide-set dark blue eyes that are fringed with lashes and black hair. In the book he's always wearing his leather jacket. Relationships[] Family[] His mom, Ellen Macauley, was bipolar and didn't take her meds very often. His earliest memory of his mom was her dropping a plate, then sitting on the floor in the middle of the pieces, and crying her eyes out. After a couple of years, Ellen went off her meds and started doing drugs.

When Nate was 11, she took off and didn't come back until he was 14. She then left again and came back when Nate was 17. By the end of the first book, she is living with Nate again. Nate's father is an alcoholic who can't support him much, at the end of the book Mr. Macauley tries out rehab again.

Nate Macauley in One of Us Is Next[] You don't break the rules, but you look the other way when someone else does. He does not like Jules in One of Us Is Next. One of Us Is Lying Quotes Showing 1-30 of 111 "I stand and hold out my hand. She gives me a skeptical look, but takes it and lets me pull her to her feet.

I put my other hand in the air. 'Bronwyn Rojas, I solemnly swear not to murder you today or at any point in the future. Deal?' 'You're ridiculous,' she mutters, going even redder. 'It concerns me you're avoiding a promise not to murder me.' — Karen M. McManus, One of Us Is Lying "I guess we're almost friends now, or as friendly as you can get when you're not one hundred percent sure the other person isn't framing you for murder." — Karen M. McManus, One of Us Is Lying "Bronwyn: Well, I'd like to try. I f you want to. Not because we're thrown together in this weird situation and I think you're hot, although I do. But because you're smart, and funny, and you do the right thing more often than you give yourself credit for. I like your horrible taste in movies and the way you never sugarcoat anything and the fact that you have an actual lizard. I'd be proud to be your girlfriend, even in a nonofficial capacity while we're, you know, being investigated for murder. Plus, I can't go more than a few minutes without wanting to kiss you, so - there's that. Nate: You're doing better than me. I never stop thinking about kissing you." — Karen M. McManus, One of Us Is Lying "I have to figure out a way to live with that, and it won't be by not forgiving other people's mistakes." — Karen M. McManus, One of Us Is Lying "We could be surrounded by walking dead in the zombie apocalypse and she'd look for the bright side." — Karen M. McManus, One of Us Is Lying "I'm kidding, but Bronwyn goes rigid. "How can you say that?" Her cheeks get red, giving her that flushed look that always unsettles me. She'll surprise you one day with how pretty she is. My mother used to say that about Bronwyn. My mother was wrong, though. There's nothing surprising about it." — Karen M. McManus, One of Us Is Lying "Honestly, I don't care what we do. I just want to stay wrapped around him for as long as possible, fighting sleep and forgetting about the rest of the world." — Karen M. McManus, One of Us Is Lying "The first seven years of the Joshua tree's life, it's just a vertical stem. No branches," she told me while we were hiking. "It takes years before it blossoms. And every branching stem stops growing after it blossoms, so you've got this complex system of dead areas and new growth." "I used to think about that, sometimes, when I wondered what parts of her might still be alive." — Karen M. McManus, One of Us Is Lying "You're not going to wither up and die from this, Addy." Ashton lectures me as she shoves me toward the shower. "He doesn't get to erase you from the world." — Karen M.

McManus, One of Us Is Lying "So our crew is back to being all girls, and stays that way for the rest of lunch. The only other guy who'd sit with us never bothers making an appearance in the cafeteria. But I pass Nate in the hallway afterward, and all the questions bubbling in my brain about Simon, Leah, and Janae disappear when he gives me a fleeting grin. Because God, it's beautiful when that boy smiles." — Karen M. McManus, One of Us Is Lying "You don't think about what's outside. Or who. Especially if she's better off forgetting you exist." — Karen M. McManus, One of Us Is Lying "Sure, sure. No rush, no pressure. It's entirely up to you, Cooper." "People always say that but it doesn't feel true." — Karen M. McManus, One of Us Is Lying "She cocks her head at me and adds, 'I don't need your commentary if you disagree, by the way.' 'I hold up my hands. "Wasn't going to say a word, Addy.'" "When did you even start knowing my name," she deadpans. I grin at her. "You've gotten kinda feisty since you lost all the hair. And the boyfriend." — Karen M. McManus, One of Us Is Lying "I let myself out and climb onto my bike, putting on my helmet. As soon as it's clipped tight I push up the kickstand and I'm pedaling hard down Jake's driveway. Once my heart finds a comfortable pounding rhythm, I remember how it almost beat out of my chest when I confessed to cheating on Jake. I'd never felt so trapped in my life. I thought I'd feel the same way in his living room today, waiting for him to tell me again I'm not good enough. But I didn't, and I don't. For the first time in a long time, I feel free." — Karen M. McManus, One of Us Is Lying Peacock's One Of Us Is Lying joins several juicy teen dramas about characters with big secrets that they hide from those closest to them. Adapted from the Karen M. McManus novel, the show's characters are dealing with so much after Simon's death that they can't help but be raw and open every time that they talk. And while Nate, Cooper, Addy, and Bronwyn try to find out who killed their peer while hoping to stay innocent, they share a lot about themselves along the way. There are many impactful quotes from season 1 of this young adult series, whether the main characters are talking about the case, the way that they have hurt each other, or the secrets that are always lingering at Bayview High. Simon's Welcome Back Message "Summer's officially over and school is back in session, and you know what that means: So am I." As far as the most likable One Of Us Is Lying characters go, Simon isn't easy to root for thanks to how he figures out everyone's secrets and shares them with the entire school. The show opens with a post from Simon's app About That, and his words are chilling. Viewers realize that Simon is ruthless and that he will write almost anything on his app. He just doesn't seem to care who he hurts, and that makes it clear that the mystery is just beginning. In the first episode, Nate and Bronwyn chat outside the school, and they're not sure what has happened to Simon yet. Nate is the first to admit that he might have died and Bronwyn says this matter-of-fact quote. This scene is meaningful for several reasons: because Nate is often wiser and more perceptive than people give him credit for and because it's the first time that Nate and Bronwyn really get a chance to talk. Fans see them fall in love quickly over the course of season 1, and it's heartwarming that Bronwyn believes in Nate even when he is arrested for Simon's murder. In the second episode "One Of Us Is Grieving," Jake wonders if Addy cheated on him, and at this moment in the story, she does everything that she can to convince him otherwise. Since the show is all about secrets and lies, Jake's words feel dramatic and juicy, but his statement also serves as some foreshadowing. After finishing season 1, fans can look back and realize that Jake was warning Addy that he knew what she did and that he was the one behind all of the horror. Addy is one of the smartest One Of Us Is Lying characters and changing her hair is just one way that she alter to change her present and future. In "One Of Us is Cracking," Addy debuts her new short hair, and when she's walking down her high school hallway, and a student whispers that she wants attention. This is really sad to see since viewers know that Addy is much nicer than her fellow popular teens and that she is starting to advocate for herself and think about what she really wants. She did everything that Jake wanted and now she's not so sure about that. When Nate's mom comes back to town, his friends are stunned since they thought that she had passed away since that's the impression that he gave. In one tough scene,

Nate and his mother go to a diner, and she tells him that she wants to help him with the case. When he says that Bronwyn assumed that she had passed away, his mom asks "Is that what you told people?" and Nate says that he prefers it.

This is a harsh and biting remark, but fans can tell that Nate is just doing his best to cope with how his parents have abandoned him. One Of Us Is Lying has some memorable young adult drama characters, including Bronwyn's younger sister Maeve who has survived a lot of time in the hospital suffering from an illness. Maeve learns that when she liked Simon and sent him some photos of herself, Bronwyn told him to stop talking to her so he wouldn't hurt her. Maeve is shocked and shares that what Bronwyn did wasn't sweet or protective at all. Bronwyn realizes that she needs to be more honest with her sister and that she can't always stop her from facing the harsh realities of the world.

In episode 7 called "One Of Us Is Not Giving Up," viewers see a flashback scene between Simon and Ms. Avery, as he knew that she helped Vanessa after she had an abortion. Ms. Avery says this powerful quote about why Simon shares gossip on his app and asked Simon to please not expose her secret. Ms. Avery's words feel significant because she's the one character who admits that maybe there was some logic behind Simon's app. The others feel that Simon unfairly targeted them and shared things that they wanted to keep private, and while that's definitely true, it also makes sense that Simon felt that his peers treated him badly. Janae is one of One Of Us Is Lying's best characters and in the second to last episode of season 1, the main characters sit in a car outside Ms. Avery's house to try to learn what she and Vanessa are hiding. They see Vanessa go into her home and while they're nervous about whether Vanessa could be up to no good, Janae breaks the tense moment. This quote fits into the scene perfectly since Janae isn't trying to be funny but her words are still hilarious and unexpected. Everyone is so worried about whether Vanessa is a new suspect that no one appreciates Janae's pop culture reference, but viewers can smile at it. The season 1 finale "One of Us Is Dead" is incredibly dramatic, as the main characters learn that Jake and Simon worked together to make it look like Simon was killed, but then Simon really did die. Jake turns out to be more evil than Addy ever realized as she finds out that he wanted to blame her for the murder. In one of the most shocking scenes, Jake holds up a gun to Addy in the woods and tells her that if she was "loyal" and hadn't cheated, Simon wouldn't have died. Addy's quote is perfect and satisfying as she shares that she isn't scared of Jake anymore and that she's going to be okay. When the teens go back to school after Jake's death in the forest, they learn that someone is aware that they killed him when their phones buzz with a text message from "Simon Says." After such a wild revelation, fans can't wait for season 2, as it's clear that the mystery is far from finished and that they have to clean up yet another mess and figure out a way to keep their secret.
