GUY MORROW

From a very early age I spent hours on the floor coloring and drawing. I spent my time building forts, making gardens, and going fishing... but painting was my passion. I studied with Bob Garden, a seascape artist, and I was introduced to artist Dick Turner at the age of 15. I spent time in the library studying techniques and the Old Masters. I studied watercolor and used egg-tempera for oil under paintings. I discovered the work of Andrew Wyeth, and I saw that he did his entire painting in egg-tempera. Once I saw the possibilities, I started raising my own chickens and collected rainwater to use in my ground up paint that I made each day. In time I would find myself painting plein air. I had big plans to go to the prestigious Chicago Art Institute. Never made it. I sometimes regret this. I found myself selling art supplies and building picture frames. In time, I would release several prints of coastal art which were marketed along the Gulf Coast, East Coast, parts of California and the Great Lakes. The Corpus Christi city council liked my art and sent me to Toledo, Spain for a one man show that went on for three weeks. Under the Reagan administration, Ambassador Robert Strauss took a collection of my paintings to be hung in the United States Embassy in Moscow, Russia for one year. Today my paintings are touring major museums, with some of America's finest artists and sculptors affiliated with the American Society of Marine Artists.
