FEATURED ARTIST

Arianna Forbes

Mixed Media Artist

Written by Shelby Pelletier

Presque Isle based mixed media artist, Arianna Forbes, is working to empower women and start conversations about the beauty of human reproduction through abstract imagery of the female form. Arianna is scheduled to show her most recent body of work entitled Ethereal Abstruse at Swanson Law Office during the First Friday Art Walk in downtown Presque Isle on June 7th, from 6-8 PM. During this show, Forbes will be displaying paintings that work to capture the artistic beauty of the female body and its role in the origin of life.

Forbes describes herself as a mixed media artist and dabbles in graphite, collage, encaustic, watercolor, oils, acrylics, and castings. She says that much of her work, both past and present, has been inspired by the feminist movement, specifically, reproductive rights, domestic violence, sexual harassment and female empowerment. Forbes works to create pieces of art that highlight the beauty and strength of the female body, while challenging society's ineffective views of both human reproduction and specifically the feminine form. She works to speak out about the double standards and objectification of women often found in western culture, by creating paintings that invite her viewers to authentically witness the beauty of the female body and the power it possesses. Forbes notes that each viewer of her artwork has their own personal reaction, whether they view her work as a simple abstraction, as encompassing aesthetic beauty, or as being vulgar and obscene. Whatever the reaction, “my artwork starts a conversation” which works to bring awareness of cultural views of the female body and challenge them.

In 2018, Forbes graduated from UMPI with a Bachelor of Fine Arts. In the spring of that year, she created and exhibited her senior art show, The V Word. This show consisted of abstract images of the vulva painted with acrylic paint on metal panels. Her use of metal symbolizes the strength of women. Her intention of this work was to educate ignorant individuals and empower women to consider their reproductive organs as fundamental to their feminine power and strength. The paintings also included commentary about women that societal norms often support, which weakens women’s feelings about their self and their bodies. “I called attention to the impact of insensitive, objectifying, and disrespectful comments nonchalantly hurled about”. The finished pieces powerfully relay the message that Forbes was working to capture; “that a woman’s strength is stronger than those words”.

During and since her time at UMPI, Forbes has been very involved and proven to be an integral member of Aroostook County’s art community as well as a passionate spokesperson working to empower women. During her time at UMPI she held many presentations on the double standards and objectification of the female form. She curated many Art Exhibits including Human Form(2015), Sketchbook Project (2015), Art of Meow(2016), and Figures(2017). She was the President of the UMPI Art Club and brought back the 12X12 Art Auction, held at Café Sorpreso in 2018, which raised over $3000 for the Art Club. She also ran UMPI’s Annual Spring Trash to Fashion Show for several years. Forbes is not afraid of hard work and the art community in Northern Maine has and continues to grow with her help.

Presently, Forbes marches forward using her art and her voice to inform the public on the strength of women and to change the way that much of society continues to view women’s bodies negatively. Forbes is excited about her upcoming show on June 7th and looks forward to the conversations to be had in its wake.
