

The Capital Commandery has been asked to use its experience, and membership, to teach youngsters about the sea, the history of the sea and the ways of those who go to sea.

So, a team is working on this project and once we have set out the parameters of what we can do, there will be a request for those of us who can tell salty stories, tell of the Revolutionary War from the aspect of naval activities, tie a bowline – and can excite an audience.
