

Types and Presence

Type	represents...	but it becomes the personality's...
8	the vibrant fullness of presence,	forcefulness around meeting instinctual needs.
9	the sense of harmonious wholeness of presence,	means of self-forgetting through instinctual preoccupations.
1	presence that lends coherence and order among parts in relation to the whole,	neurotic rigidity around having the “right” instinctual resources.
2	the holding, nurturing aspect of presence,	lack of transparency of its own instinctual motivations.
3	the quality of presence that is radiant and precious,	narcissism about its capacity to obtain instinctual resources.
4	the bottomless depth of presence,	reaction to instinct-based psychological activity being a shallow and inadequate foundation for identity.
5	presence bearing witness to itself,	fear of inadequacy in dealing with one’s embodied, instinctual nature.
6	the sense of realness and truth of presence,	fear of not getting one’s instinctual needs met.
7	the freedom and unconditionality of presence,	attempts to use instinctual resources to find inner fulfillment.
