DEDICATION

To a lady so gracious and winning and sweet
That she's loved by each student of old Argos High;
To a friend so loyal, devoted and true
And she's that to each student of old Argos High.
To her who has gained the respect of us all;
As day after day, she so patiently taught
Not only the lessons of textbook and rule
But to set forth ideals – these things she has sought.
To you, Miss Mitten, for your faith in us all,
We dedicate this yearbook "Memory Lane,"
And hope as you leaf its pages through,
Your memories will just as pleasant remain.

CLASS PROPHECY

1951<sup>7</sup> Graduates

One morning in the year 1965 I was working around the house as usual, when the postman came with a special delivery letter from Washington. Being curious as to what the letter contained, it didn't take long to open it. To my surprise it was from my old school chum, Ila Herrin, who was now married to a very prosperous statesman and had settled down in Washington to raise a family. She invited me to come and spend a few days with her, since we hadn't seen each other for such a long time. This excited me very much, so I went next door to my neighbor, Joyce Mc Chesney. Joyce was also a school chum of Ila's and I took the liberty and asked her to make the trip with me.

Two days later Joyce and I were on the train headed for Washington. Just as we were getting settled along came the conductor. To our surprise there was Earl Eiler collecting the tickets. Earl made our trip a pleasant one. When we arrived at our destination, Ila was there to meet us. She was happy that Joyce came along. Before going to Ila's home, she had to stop at the Capitol Building to see her husband and said she wouldn't be long. Since this was Joyce's and my first trip to Washington, we decided to look around. As we were viewing the buildings Joyce yelled out, "Oh no!" But yes, yes, it was Devane Sherwood! We found out after a chat, that Devane was a painter just like his father. He was at this time painting the White House. We also found out that Bill Clarke was a new senator and Dean Lewis was a representative and both were making great progress. It wasn't long before Ila returned from her errand. When we arrived home, Ila started preparing supper and planning for the night ahead. Later that evening Ila took us to the Green Dubbin Club. We were told that Don Shultz was the owner and seemed to be doing quite well. We hadn't been there long when Don joined our table and we four talked about the Good Old School Days. The floor show was about to begin so our attention turned to this. The show consisted of four acrobats, who proved to be Willis Burroughs, his wife, and twin girls. The speed and easiness of the team held the complete admiration of the crowd the full length of the show. A short time later, we bid Don a farewell as this had been a full day for Joyce and me.

While driving home through the busy section we noticed a crowd of people around two wrecked cars. Being curious we stopped and found it to be Fred Baumgart and Harold Fear who had collided with a truck. One of the first persons to show up was Chief George Shunk, who immediately took the boys into Court. Since we knew these boys we just had to go along. The case was presented to Judge McCune. The boys paid their fine, then we all chatted for some time. It was indeed getting quite late so we departed so that we might get some rest.

The next afternoon Ila took us to a very exclusive restaurant for lunch. The proprietor, being the former Iliene Hardesty, had a family of three little Hights.

Later that afternoon we were invited to a four o'clock tea at the home of another one of our old schoolmates, Bonnie Vanata. This was quite a large affair, and we especially noticed so many children. Bonnie told us that twelve of the little angels belonged to her. She also told us that she had two private nurses, Ruth Wight and Normalee Pflughaupt, who came each day to help her take care of the children.

The next day we attended a fashion show. This was really very beautiful and it was all the work of Connie Masterman, assisted by Ann Van Der Weele, who were both dress designers.

On the way home we stopped at the filling station. There we saw Gene Rowe and learned that he was an executive of the Standard Oil Company.

After arriving at Ila's we sat down to relax and listened to the radio. There was a lady giving a speech about the conditions in Europe. When she finished we found it to be Karolina Lauer, who had returned from Germany to become a citizen of the United States.

After having stayed a little longer than Joyce and I had intended we decided that we should return by air. So, we proceeded to the airport where we boarded a plane which was bound for Chicago. To our amazement we found that the stewardess was Bonnie Andrews.

We enjoyed our trip and arrived home, tired but happy, after experiencing the joy of seeing our old school friends.
