LASER | ROBOTIC | SAW WELDING

Laser Welding Machine is a precise method for merging metal components through the use of a laser light beam. It has found widespread applications across various industries, particularly in automating small-component welding, where its tight control eliminates the need for post-weld cleanup.

MODELS - 1500W AND 2000W

Laser Welding Machines

Robot welding is the use of mechanized programmable tools, which completely automate a welding process by both performing the weld and handling the part. Processes such as gas metal arc welding, while often automated, are not necessarily equivalent to robot welding, since a human operator sometimes prepares the materials to be welded.

Robotic Welding Machines

SAW is normally operated in the automatic or mechanized mode, however, semi-automatic (hand-held) SAW guns with pressurized or gravity flux feed delivery are available. The process is normally limited to the flat or horizontal-fillet welding positions (although horizontal groove position welds have been done with a special arrangement to support the flux).

MODELS - 1000W AND 1500W

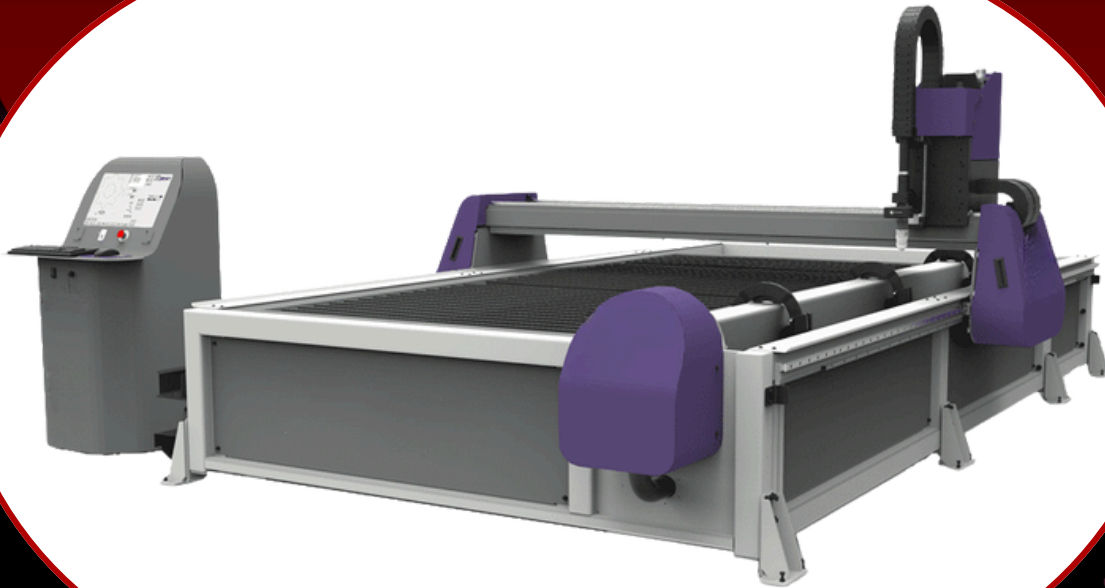

SAW Welding Machines

Plasma cutting is a thermal cutting method that uses a high-temperature, electrically ionized gas (plasma) to melt the metal and then blow away material from the workpiece. This method is particularly suited to create flat 2D shape patterns out of thick sheets of conductive metals like stainless, copper, brass, and aluminum. Sheet metal can be cut as well, but the precision is not as good.
