STORYBOOK THEATER WITH GRAYSON: UNDERSTANDING OUR EMOTIONS

Where stories jump off the page and onto the stage! Join performance artist Grayson on a theatrical literary adventure, this time with a focus on identifying and understanding our emotions. Become immersed in storytelling, each day exploring a new book all about feelings big and small. Children will play drama games, exercise imagination, build their confidence, and learn lasting skills in collaboration and empathy.

Grayson is a playwright, educator, performer, dog dad, and inveterate theater kid. He graduated from Pacific University in 2017 after studying creative writing and theater. Later, he rejoined Pacific University as a staff member for Theatre and Dance. He also works in education with Bag&Baggage Productions, directing the Hillsboro Youth Performance Ensemble (HYPE) and leading workshops all over Washington County in local schools, libraries, and community centers. His lifelong love of performing arts began in community children's theater and nothing keeps that passion stoked like helping cultivate young emerging artists. When Grayson isn't in the theater, he can be found writing new stories, playing tabletop games, or doting on one of his small dogs.
