

You Bet Your

Life

Picture if you will seven people alone in virgin forests. Nothing but packs on their backs and plastic raincoats dripping with water. Nowhere to go but straight up, along the Long Hungry Trail. The magnificent seven bet their lives and they did return safely to the Club Mobile. This is just one chapter in the true life adventures of You Bet Your Life's last club outing to the Great Smokey Mountains in North Carolina. Thanks to Eric's efficient fact sheets we can report that 1249 miles were driven, 20 miles were walked for a total of 1269 miles traveled. Total trip expenses were $138.32 ($56.16 for food and $82.26 for gas). On the return trip they even found time to stop in Atlanta and go ice skating at the OMNI and shopping at one of the huge shopping centers outside of Atlanta.

Now that we're safely back in Florida we're ready to set off on another adventure. June 3rd and 4th will find us canoeing down the Sante Fe River in north Florida. We'll be leaving from Kris and Eric's house promptly at 6:30 AM on Saturday, June 3rd, and return sometime Sunday evening. Anyone interested in going contact Eric at 295-0801 and he will help you as best he can in making arrangements to rent and haul a canoe if you need one. We'll be camping out so get your tents and sleeping bags ready. As usual Kris and Cheryl will shop for food for everyone so if you have any special requests contact one of them.

Don't forget to give Eric H. your dollar for the trip pool.

From long experience a correlated flow control system is self serving in its practical aspects. By this we can safely assume that the total data evaluation lacks one vital factor. We are wild and crazy people!

- Keep in mind our upcoming Keys trips. We're also planning another trip to North Carolina. We're going to break past tradition and head up to North Carolina in mid-summer for a cool, refreshing hike along the river into Walnut Bottoms (by popular demand).

Ah yes, don't forget our cruise the first week of August. If you haven't already contacted Bon Voyage Travel Agency in Winter Park and given them your deposit, you're probably too late. Don't forget that your final payment of $175.00 is due July 1st.

After replacement of two new rear shock absorbers and a new left rear tire Eric is happy to report that we should all be noticing a smoother ride in the Club Mobile.

As Chuckles the clown used to say: A little song, a little dance, a little seltzer down your pants.
