Brooklyn-based DJ and curator Arianna Danae brings an unmistakable New York energy to the dance floor, shaped by her Armenian heritage, a lifelong curiosity for music, and an instinct for musical discovery. With a curator's ear and a love for the unexpected, she builds patient, groove-driven journeys that celebrate nostalgia, surprise, and the joy of hearing familiar records in entirely new ways.

Arianna first made her mark in Brooklyn with her monthly Rebelle party at Jupiter Disco, where she cultivated a community around thoughtful programming and emerging talent. The series laid the foundation for her career as a curator, leading to a residency and curatorial role at Flash in Washington, D.C., and later to her current work helping shape music programming at Elsewhere in Brooklyn. She is also a resident of Laylit, the internationally celebrated party championing music and culture from North Africa, the Middle East, and Southwest Asia.

Whether behind the decks or behind the scenes, Arianna is driven by the same philosophy: great dance floors aren't built by chasing trends, but through curiosity, thoughtful curation, and creating moments people remember long after the music ends.
