If you're considering homeschooling your child in the state of Texas, understanding the homeschooling laws and requirements is crucial. Here's a brief overview to help you get started:

1. Notification Requirements:

- In Texas, homeschooling families are not required to register with the state or obtain approval from state or local authorities.
- However, parents are required to withdraw their child from public school and provide written notification to the school district of their intent to homeschool.

2. Required Subjects:

- Texas law does not specify the subjects that homeschooling families must teach. Instead, parents have the flexibility to design their curriculum according to their child's needs and educational goals.
- However, it is generally recommended that homeschooling families cover the core subjects of reading, spelling, grammar, mathematics, and good citizenship.

3. Testing and Evaluation:

Texas does not mandate standardized testing for homeschooled students. However, parents may choose to administer tests or assessments to evaluate their child's academic progress.

4. Record-Keeping:

While not required by law, it is advisable for homeschooling families to maintain records of their children's academic progress, including attendance, coursework, and any assessments.

5. Graduation Requirements:

Homeschooled students in Texas must meet the same graduation requirements as students in public schools. These requirements include completing a certain number of credits in core subjects and electives.
