Homeschooling in Oklahoma provides families with the opportunity to educate their children at home according to state guidelines. Here's an overview of the homeschooling laws and requirements in Oklahoma:

1. Notification Requirement:

- Oklahoma homeschooling law requires parents to provide written notification to their local school district of their intent to homeschool.
- Notification should be submitted annually, before the start of the school year, or within ten days of withdrawing the child from public school.
- The notification should include basic information about the homeschooling parents, the names and ages of the homeschooled children, and a description of the curriculum.

2. Curriculum and Instruction:

- Oklahoma does not mandate a specific curriculum for homeschooling families. Parents have the freedom to choose or develop their curriculum and teaching materials.
- However, the curriculum should cover the subjects typically taught in public schools, including language arts, mathematics, science, social studies, and health.

3. Assessment and Evaluation:

- Oklahoma homeschooling law does not require standardized testing or formal assessments for homeschooled students.
- However, parents are responsible for assessing their child's academic progress through methods they deem appropriate, such as regular evaluations, portfolios of the child's work, or standardized tests if desired.

4. Record-Keeping:

- Homeschooling families in Oklahoma are required to maintain records of their children's attendance and academic progress.
- Records should include attendance records, samples of the child's work, results of any assessments or evaluations, and a list of textbooks or other educational materials used.

5. Graduation Requirements:

Oklahoma homeschooling students are not subject to specific graduation requirements. However, if a homeschooled student wishes to earn a high school diploma, they may need to meet certain criteria established by the parent or homeschool program.
