If you're considering homeschooling your child in the state of Delaware, understanding the homeschooling laws and requirements is crucial. Here's a brief overview to help you get started:

1. Homeschooling Options:

In Delaware, families have two primary options for homeschooling:

- Establishing a Homeschool
- Enrolling in a Homeschooling Co-op

2. Establishing a Homeschool:

If you choose to establish a homeschool, you must:

- Submit a Certificate of Intent to the Delaware Department of Education.
- Provide instruction in the subjects required by law, including language arts, mathematics, social studies, science, and health.
- Keep attendance records and submit an annual assessment of educational progress.

3. Enrolling in a Homeschooling Co-op:

Families may also choose to enroll their children in a homeschooling co-op, which provides support, curriculum resources, and cooperative learning opportunities to homeschooling families. These co-ops may have additional requirements beyond those of home-based instruction programs.

4. Graduation Requirements:

Homeschooled students in Delaware must meet the same graduation requirements as students in public schools. These requirements include completing a minimum number of credits in core subjects such as English, mathematics, science, social studies, and electives.
