

HSP App: Homeschooling State Laws Informational: New York

Homeschooling Laws and Requirements in New York

Disclaimer: The following information is provided for informational purposes only and should not be construed as legal advice. Homeschooling laws and regulations may vary, and it is essential to verify the information with local county and state officials. The author is not a lawyer, and this document does not constitute legal advice.

Homeschooling in New York provides families with the opportunity to educate their children at home according to their preferences and beliefs. Here's an overview of the homeschooling laws and requirements in New York:

1. Notification Requirement:

- In New York, parents who wish to homeschool their children must submit an annual notice of intent to the local school district superintendent by July 1st each year. The notice must include basic information about the child being homeschooled, the names and addresses of the parents, and an outline of the proposed curriculum.
- Parents may begin homeschooling after receiving acknowledgment of receipt from the school district.

2. Curriculum and Instruction:

- Homeschooling parents in New York have the freedom to choose their curriculum and teaching materials. There are no specific curriculum requirements mandated by the state.
- Instruction must cover the subjects typically taught in public schools, including math, science, social studies, language arts, and health education.

3. Record-Keeping:

New York homeschooling families must maintain attendance records and a portfolio of student work for each homeschooled child. These records should be kept for at least four years and made available for review by the school district upon request.

4. Assessment and Evaluation:

- Homeschooled students in New York are required to undergo an annual assessment. Parents may choose from several assessment options, including standardized tests, written evaluations by certified teachers, or review by a homeschooling review panel.
- Parents must submit an annual assessment report to the school district superintendent.

5. Qualifications for Homeschool Teachers:

- New York does not require homeschooling parents to have specific educational qualifications or teaching credentials.
- Parents are responsible for providing a quality education to their children and ensuring that their homeschooling program meets the state's educational standards.

Useful Resources:

- New York State Education Department - Homeschooling Information: <http://www.p12.nysed.gov/nonpub/homeinstruction/>
- New York Home Educators' Network (NYHEN): <https://www.nyhen.org/>

It's crucial to stay informed about homeschooling laws and regulations in New York, as they may change over time. Consult with local county and state officials for the most up-to-date information and ensure compliance with New York's homeschooling requirements. Homeschooling offers families the flexibility to provide personalized education to their children, and understanding the legal requirements ensures a successful homeschooling journey.