If you're considering homeschooling your child in the state of Wisconsin, it's crucial to understand the homeschooling laws and requirements. Here's a brief overview to help you get started:

1. Notification Requirements:

- Homeschooling families in Wisconsin are required to file a homeschool report with the local school district administrator by October 15th of each school year or within 30 days of beginning homeschooling.
- The report must include the name, age, and grade level of each homeschooled child, the name and address of the homeschool, and a statement of educational philosophy.

2. Curriculum and Instruction:

- Wisconsin does not prescribe a specific curriculum for homeschooling families. Instead, parents have the freedom to choose or create a curriculum that meets their child's educational needs and goals.
- The curriculum must provide a sequentially progressive program of fundamental instruction in the subjects required in public schools, including reading, language arts, mathematics, science, and social studies.

3. Assessment and Evaluation:

- Homeschooled students in Wisconsin are not required to undergo standardized testing or assessment.
- However, parents may choose to assess their child's academic progress through standardized tests, portfolio reviews, or evaluations by certified teachers.

4. Record-Keeping:

While not explicitly required by law, it is advisable for homeschooling families to maintain records of their children's academic progress, including attendance, coursework, and assessment results.

5. Graduation Requirements:

- Homeschooled students in Wisconsin must meet the same graduation requirements as students in public schools to receive a high school diploma.
- These requirements typically include completing a certain number of credits in core subjects and electives.
