If you're considering homeschooling your child in Mississippi, understanding the state's homeschooling laws and requirements is crucial. Here's an overview to help you get started:

1. Notification Requirements:

- Homeschooling families in Mississippi are required to notify the superintendent of their local school district in writing of their intent to homeschool.
- Notification should include the names, ages, and addresses of the children to be homeschooled, the name and address of the parent(s) providing the instruction, and a statement of the intent to provide regular instruction.

2. Curriculum and Instruction:

- Mississippi does not mandate a specific curriculum for homeschooling families. Instead, parents have the freedom to choose or create a curriculum that best suits their child's educational needs and goals.
- The curriculum should provide instruction in the same subjects taught in public schools, including reading, grammar, mathematics, science, history, and citizenship.

3. Assessment and Evaluation:

- Homeschooled students in Mississippi are not required to undergo standardized testing or assessment.
- However, parents may choose to assess their child's academic progress through standardized tests, portfolio reviews, or evaluations by certified teachers.

4. Record-Keeping:

While not explicitly required by law, it is advisable for homeschooling families to maintain records of their children's academic progress, including attendance, coursework, and assessment results.

5. Graduation Requirements:

- Homeschooled students in Mississippi must meet the same graduation requirements as students in public schools to receive a high school diploma.
- These requirements typically include completing a certain number of credits in core subjects and electives.
