If you're considering homeschooling your child in the state of West Virginia, it's essential to understand the homeschooling laws and requirements. Here's a brief overview to help you get started:

1. Notification Requirements:

- Homeschooling families in West Virginia are required to notify the local county superintendent of their intent to homeschool.
- The notification must include the names and ages of the children who will be homeschooled, the address where the homeschooling will take place, and the qualifications of the parent or guardian who will oversee the homeschooling program.

2. Curriculum and Instruction:

- West Virginia does not prescribe a specific curriculum for homeschooling families. Instead, parents have the flexibility to design their curriculum according to their child's educational needs and goals.
- However, the curriculum must include subjects commonly taught in public schools, such as reading, language arts, mathematics, science, and social studies.

3. Assessment and Evaluation:

- Homeschooled students in West Virginia are required to undergo an annual assessment to evaluate their academic progress.
- The assessment can take various forms, including standardized tests, portfolio reviews, or evaluations by certified teachers.

4. Record-Keeping:

While not explicitly required by law, it is advisable for homeschooling families to maintain records of their children's academic progress, including attendance, coursework, and assessment results.

5. Graduation Requirements:

- Homeschooled students in West Virginia must meet the same graduation requirements as students in public schools to receive a high school diploma.
- These requirements typically include completing a certain number of credits in core subjects and electives.
