If you're considering homeschooling your child in New Hampshire, understanding the state's homeschooling laws and requirements is crucial. Here's an overview to help you get started:

1. Notification Requirements:

- New Hampshire requires homeschooling families to file an annual notice of intent to homeschool with the participating agency.
- The notice should include the names, ages, and addresses of the children, as well as the names and addresses of the parents providing the instruction.
- Parents must submit the notice annually, typically by July 1st or 30 days prior to beginning homeschooling.

2. Curriculum and Instruction:

- Homeschooling parents in New Hampshire have the freedom to choose or create their curriculum. There are no state-mandated requirements regarding the subjects to be taught or the instructional materials to be used.
- However, the curriculum should cover the basic subjects typically taught in public schools, including reading, writing, mathematics, science, and social studies.

3. Assessment and Evaluation:

- New Hampshire does not require homeschooling students to undergo standardized testing or assessment.
- However, parents may choose to assess their child's academic progress through various methods, such as standardized tests, portfolio reviews, or evaluations by certified teachers.

4. Record-Keeping:

While not explicitly mandated by law, it is advisable for homeschooling families to maintain records of their children's academic progress, including attendance, coursework, and any assessments or evaluations conducted.

5. Graduation Requirements:

- Homeschooled students in New Hampshire must meet the same graduation requirements as students in public schools to receive a high school diploma.
- These requirements typically include completing a certain number of credits in core subjects and electives.
