If you're considering homeschooling your child in Nebraska, understanding the state's homeschooling laws and requirements is crucial. Here's an overview to help you get started:

1. Notification Requirements:

- Nebraska requires homeschooling families to file a notarized affidavit of intent to homeschool with their local school district. This affidavit must be submitted annually by September 15th or within 30 days of establishing a homeschool program.
- The affidavit should include the names and ages of the children to be homeschooled, the name and address of the parent(s) providing the instruction, and a brief outline of the intended curriculum.

2. Curriculum and Instruction:

- Homeschooling parents in Nebraska have the flexibility to choose or create their curriculum. There are no state-mandated requirements regarding the subjects to be taught or the instructional materials to be used.
- However, the curriculum should cover the basic subjects typically taught in public schools, including reading, writing, mathematics, science, and social studies.

3. Assessment and Evaluation:

- Nebraska does not require homeschooling students to undergo standardized testing or assessment.
- However, parents may choose to assess their child's academic progress through various methods, such as standardized tests, portfolio reviews, or evaluations by certified teachers.

4. Record-Keeping:

While not explicitly mandated by law, it is advisable for homeschooling families to maintain records of their children's academic progress, including attendance, coursework, and any assessments or evaluations conducted.

5. Graduation Requirements:

- Homeschooled students in Nebraska must meet the same graduation requirements as students in public schools to receive a high school diploma.
- These requirements typically include completing a certain number of credits in core subjects and electives.
