If you're considering homeschooling your child in the state of Georgia, understanding the homeschooling laws and requirements is crucial. Here's a brief overview to help you get started:

1. Homeschooling Options:

In Georgia, families have two primary options for homeschooling:

- Establishing a home study program (homeschooling independently)
- Enrolling in a private school that offers a homeschooling option

2. Home Study Program:

If you choose to establish a home study program, you must:

- Submit a Declaration of Intent to homeschool to the Georgia Department of Education within 30 days of starting homeschooling.
- Maintain attendance records and submit an annual attendance report to the Georgia Department of Education.
- Provide a basic educational program covering reading, language arts, mathematics, social studies, and science.
- Administer standardized testing in grades 3, 6, and 9 and maintain records of test results.

3. Private School Option:

You can enroll your child in a private school that offers a homeschooling option. Private schools in Georgia are not subject to the same regulations as public schools, but they must meet certain requirements, including providing a quality education and keeping attendance records.

4. Graduation Requirements:

Homeschooled students in Georgia must meet the same graduation requirements as students in public schools. These requirements include earning a minimum number of credits in core subjects such as English, mathematics, science, social studies, and electives.
